Fear 'Foul Play' In Disappearance

4-State Police Hunt On

Seek Witness, Kidnap Suspect

ASHLAND—Police of four states joined today in a search for an Ashland man, charged with kidnaping 14-year-old Sylvia Benepe last Friday near the Ashland county children's home.

The girl, believed abducted by Fred Horton, alias Fred Wharton or Fred Whorton, is the key witness in the case of her father, John Benepe, accused of statutory offenses against her and an 11-year-old sister.

A warrant for the arrest of Horton on kidnaping charges was issued late yesterday by Ashland Police Chief Harry L. Smith. Horton, a dishonorably discharged navy veteran with a long criminal record, is believed by police to have kidnaped the girl on the day after Benepe was indicted.

Horton, his wife and family and the Benepe girl disappeared Friday afternoon. Fearing the child may have met foul play, authorities have also conducted an intensive search for her body. Four feet of water in the basement of the shack occupied by the Hortons, west of Ashland, was dragged and all other possible places searched to no avail.

WAS BABY-SITTER

Chief Smith said contact has been made with the girl's mother, Mrs. Ruth Imhoff in New York City and with an aunt, Mrs. J. R. Lunny in Cornwells Heights, Pa. Neither indicated they knew of the child's whereabouts.

Police learned the Benepe girl had acted as baby-sitter for the Hortons on several occasions and had spent much time in their home.

Prior to leaving Ashland, Horton cashed a fraudulent check for $70 at a local service station, several hours before the girl's disappearance, police said. Officers also believe that a sump pump taken from the Horton home, may have been sold by Horton to obtain more money.

Since Benepe cannot be brought to trial without the star witness

Buy Park Avenue Building

Physicians Plan Medical Center

Sale of the Colonial apartments at Park avenue west and South Benton street to three Mansfield area physicians for use as a medical center was announced today.

The physicians are Dr. Milton C. Oakes and Dr. Myron S. Reed of Mansfield and Dr. Paul Blackstone of Bellville.

The transaction was made through Mrs. Pearl DeCamp, co-owner and manager of the Mansfield Realty company. Price of the building was about $40,000. The apartment was bought from Mrs. DeCamp's sister, Mrs. Anita M. Sutherland, Mansfield native, whose home is in New York City.

Although the sale has been completed, Dr. Oakes said today that application for incorporation papers and detailed plans for the medical center were being held up because of the new rent control law which governs operation of the apartment building.

The Colonial, a six-apartment building, was erected in 1905 by E. W. Dann, president of the Richland Mutual Insurance company. Dann had purchased the ground from Elzy Wolff, father of Mrs. Henry Brunner, who owned considerable land in that area.

Mrs. Sutherland bought the apartment building from Dann in 1912.

Crime Rate Takes Leap

Arrest for criminal offenses in Mansfield increased 54 per cent in a three month period this year, according to figures compiled by the police identification bureau.

The records disclose the police department made 549 arrests for criminal offenses in the three-month period. Arrested in January were 145, February 180, and March 224.

Intoxication, as usual comprised a major portion of the police arrests. However arrests on that charge declined in the month of March when other crime was at its peak.

Intoxication arrests in January were 104 and in March 78.

Boosting the March total was 11 persons arrested on gambling charges, six on liquor law violations and 10 on prostitution and commercialized vice. Only two arrests on these charges were made during the months of January and February.

Petit larceny cases also reflected a crime increase during March. Six persons were arrested on that charge in March, two in February and two in January.

Two breaking and entering arrests were made in both March and February, and none in January.

Assault and battery arrests for the three months were January 10, February 6, and March 8.

Mirror Lake Again Green

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Apparently someone thinks Mirror lake on the Ohio state campus looks better green than it does in natural water-type color.

Last Feb. 27, someone dumped in a harmless dye developed during the war, so authorities cleaned and drained the lake and put in fresh water last week.

Today the lake was green as grass again.

'Clean City In 3 Days'

Trash Collection Planned In May

"We'll clean up the entire city in three days," Earl T. Garrison, Mansfield's Service-Safety Director, announced last night at the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce fire prevention committee meeting, at the C of C assembly rooms.

Garrison said city trucks will pick up trash in all six wards in three days during the first week in May.

W. G. Schultz and Albert L. Allen jr., co-chairmen of the fire prevention committee, urged Mansfielders to begin now to clean their basements, attics and yards.

R. M. Myers and H. J. Londot, co-chairmen of the industrial sub-committee, will provide the eight men per day to accompany the trucks and will also direct clean-up drives in industry.

Under supervision of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, rat control posters will be distributed to merchants and movies on rat damage will be shown in the schools. Heading this phase of clean-up week are John W.

First Wife Files Claim

Tangled Marriages Bared In Law Suit

The legality of a marriage and the disposal of a $32,580 estate hinge on the ruling to be made in an action heard in probate court yesterday.

The petition was filed by Inez F. Dibble of Jackson, Mich., who claims she was the legal wife of Herbert L. Dibble, president of the Carton Service, Inc., of Shelby, at the time of his death on March 31, 1948.

Defendant in the action is Jewell G. Dibble, 205 Park avenue west, who claimed she and Mr. Dibble were married Jan. 6, 1948, after receiving a license in Richland county probate court.

Inez Dibble maintains in her petition that if the defendant and Mr. Dibble were married as the second Mrs. Dibble alleged, the marriage was void because she (the plaintiff) is the widow and surviving spouse and entitled to rights as the surviving spouse.

The plaintiff said she and the deceased were married on June 15, 1909, and they were still married at the time of his death. She added that Jewell G. Dibble wrongfully claims to be the widow and surviving spouse.

Jewell G. Dibble asked the court to determine that she is the surviving spouse and entitled to allowances and rights, and asked that the petition of the plaintiff be dismissed.

In a joint answer, the three daughters, Mrs. Eunice Dibble O'Neil and Mrs. Elaine Dibble Williams, both of Jackson, Mich., and Mrs. Elvira Dibble Baker of Shelby, said the allegations of the petition are true, and their parents were still married at the time of their father's death. They asked that Inez F. Dibble be determined to be the widow.

Jewell G. Dibble was named administratrix, with will annexed, of the estate of Mr. Dibble.

Under his will, Jewell G. Dibble was left the estate, after bequests of 25 Carton company shares each were made to his three daughters. The shares are valued at $100 each.

Inez F. Dibble was represented by the law firm of Spieth, Spring and Bell, of Cleveland, and Jewell G. Dibble, by Anderson, Will and O'Donnell.

Probate Judge Stuart H. Cramer, after hearing testimony, instructed the attorneys to file briefs, and a decision will be made later.

Supports Start Row

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Agriculture Secretary Brannan returns to Capitol Hill today to battle for his new farm program which has acquired labels ranging from "statesmanship" to "regimentation."

Brannan's proposal to let meat, milk and eggs seek their natural price levels with the government making up any considerable Republican wrath losses to farmers, brought and some guarded approval.

Rep. Cooley (D) N. C., and Sen. Thomas (D) Okla., House and Senate Agriculture committee chairmen, immediately asked Brannan to submit his plan in legislative form.

An Agriculture department spokesman said an administration bill will be ready in a week or ten days.

Meanwhile, Brannan is slated to appear today before the House group to spell out terms of the program in more detail.

Korea Seeks Seat on UN

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y. — (UP) — The United Nations' Security council will consider Korea's application for UN membership today with Russia certain to block the bid with her 30th veto.

The long-standing east-west feud over the two rival Korean governments came up for a new round of bitter charges as the UN assembly's steering committee began its debate on Israel's bid to become the 59th UN member, and the Indonesian problem.

Voting on the American-backed southern Korean republic was virtually certain to be along straight east-west lines in the Security council.

The United States, Argentine, Canada, China, Cuba, Egypt, France, Norway, and Britain favor admission of Korea to the UN.

Russia and Ukraine will oppose with Soviet delegate Jacob Malik slated to cast the veto.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Richard H. Crowe today faces a federal jury with all but $60,000 of the $883,660 he is accused of stealing back in the National City bank.

F. B. I. agents, who from the first doubted Crowe's story of tossing $690,000 worth of bonds into the Atlantic ocean "to make the bank angry," found them in the attic of Crowe's Staten Island home.

NANKING — (INS) — China's acting President Li Tsung-Jen offered today to take punishment as a "war criminal" in a move to make peace with Chinese communists and end the long drawn out civil conflict.

A little royal dignity

THE PRINCE AND THE EASTER BUNNY—Unaware of his royal blood and the complications it will bring into his life later, Britain's Prince Charles, now 19 weeks old, exhibits just the traits common to all babies. The heir presumptive, son of Princess. Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, was photographed by a friend of the duke as the infant investigated a toy bunny given to him for Easter.

Parents Drop 3 Children From Window

Five members of a Hanna road family were burned, one seriously, as they fled their burning home through a window at 4:40 a. m. today. Another occupant of the house was injured as he jumped through a window.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Oswalt jr., awakened by the crackling of flames in their three-room cottage at the northern edge of the city, quickly dropped their three small children, one by one, through a small window after the father smashed the glass with his fist.

The parents followed the children out the window. Brud Richardson, Mrs. Oswalt's cousin, fled through another window. The parents and two of their three children are in General hospital.

Most seriously injured was four-year-old Frank Oswalt, who suffered second and third-degree burns over more than 50 per cent of his body. His condition was reported poor today at General hospital where he is under an oxygen tent.

Oswalt's condition was reported good although he suffered first and second degree burns about the hands, face and shoulders. He also received severe cuts on his left hand and forearm when he smashed the window with his fist in his fight to save his family.

Mrs. Oswalt's condition is fair. She suffered burns on the hands.

The Oswalts' eight-month-old daughter Carol, suffered minor burns on the hands and a small cut on the head when her mother dropped her five feet out of the window. The other youngster, Sandra, 2, was sent to the home of relatives after being treated for first-degree burns on the hands and forearms.

Richardson suffered minor cuts when he escaped through the window of the living room where he was sleeping.

Oswalt, 24, is employed by the Saltzgaber Distributing company.

Ward Pace and J. R. Weimer, neighbors, were awakened by the screams of the Oswalt children and worked furiously for an hour to extinguish the blaze. The only water available was from a pump in the Oswalts' yard.

DRIVEN BACK

Pace and Weimer said they were driven back by flames when they first tried to enter the house by the front door. They had to enter through a rear door leading to the kitchen.

Firemen said the flames apparently started from an oil stove in the front room.

A 50-gallon drum of kerosene on the front porch of the cottage wasn't damaged by the fire.

The interior of the house was destroyed except for some furniture in the kitchen and the baby's crib. But fixtures were damaged by heat and smoke. The children's toys were melted into a shapeless mass on the floor of the front room, and a cardboard closet and the clothes it contained were burned beyond repair.

8 Nations Ask Arms

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Eight free North Atlantic pact nations today formally asked the United States to provide arms to ensure the defense of western Europe and the peace of the democratic world."

Secretary of State Dean Acheson disclosed the request. He said he could not at this time give a figure "or an informed guess" on what the cost to the United States of the program would be. That is what is worrying many congressmen.

The arms request came from the five Brussels pact nations—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—and Norway, Denmark and Italy.

AMOUNT NOT KNOWN

It has been estimated that the arms program will cost $1,800,000,000 in the first year. But this is unofficial.

The five Brussels pact nations did not give specific figures as to their needs for guns, planes, equipment and such. Italy, Denmark and Norway, an exchange of notes disclosed, already have given their specific needs. They were not disclosed.

The United States reply said that Congress will be requested to provide military funds for common defense.

Acheson, in a statement issued with the exchange of notes between the eight nations and the United States, said the European requests for military assistance were "predicated upon an urgent need for improvement in the defensive capabilities of the countries requiring such assistance, thereby discouraging aggression against them."

Arrest 'Girl' Flame-Eater As Deserter

BURTONWOOD AIR BASE, Eng. — (UP) — Donna, the "woman" fire eater whose act has been wowing British vaudeville audiences for the past three years, was unmasked today as an American G. I. deserter from Philadelphia.

U. S. army authorities said "Donna Delbert" of the English stage confessed "she" actually is Pfc. Delbert E. Hill of Philadelphia.

Beskirted Hill was arrested yesterday in a theatrical boarding house in Newcastle and turned over to army authorities on charges of war-time desertion.

Police removed as evidence from his room female padding, including a pair of "falsies" They left behind three ducks which were part of his stage act.

Warns Voting To Be Watched

WASHINGTON — (INS) Rep. Lesinski (D) Mich., co-sponsor of the Taft-Hartley repeal bill, warned today that every member of the House will be put on record as for or against the legislation.

The chairman of the House Labor committee stated that "watchers" will be stationed in the House galleries to note how each member votes on non-record tallies.

Lesinski declined to say who the "watchers" would be but it is assumed they will be representatives of labor organizations.

April Rains Turn White

Unpredictable April brought Mansfield a brief snow flurry at 11:30 a. m. today while thermometers stood at 41 degrees.

Early today the weatherman's prediction of warmer temperatures showed some possibility of being fullfilled, but the early morning sun was soon blanketed by clouds.

In the meantime weather forecasters were prompted to call the first eight days in April "once in a lifetime spring weather."

The past eight days in Ohio have been so close to normal for this time of the year that it can be classed as a "rarity," weather forecasters said.

Needless to say that statement was made before today's snow flurry.

Cooler weather is predicted for Saturday, with possible showers on Sunday. A rising trend is predicted for Monday and Tuesday.

Mansfield's low this morning was 33 degrees. It was 41 degrees at noon. Yesterday's high was 52 degrees.

Council's Opposition To Conveyor

MANSFIELD city council's action in serving as the voice of the railroads to oppose the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio river conveyor belt appears difficult to understand.

The basis of the railroads' opposition—now made officially the opposition of Mansfield's people, since the council speaks officially for our citizenry—appears to be this:

The conveyor would haul some of the freight now hauled by railroads; the conveyor belt would create no new commerce; "widespread unemployment" would result due to loss of railroad freight shipment; abandonment of railroads and loss of railroad revenue would "substantially" reduce tax revenues, with resulting loss to schools, subdivisions, the state, etc.

In the light of history, no sane man would attempt to argue, and no intelligent city council would pass a resolution condemning the building of railroads.

Yet when railroads were first extending their steel lines and smoking locomotives across the face of the nation, the same arguments, or very similar ones, might have applied—such as:

Thousands of teamsters and wagon-makers would be thrown out of work; many dealers in horses and mules would be put out of business; grain and feed dealers would be hard hit due to loss of horse and mule feed consumption, etc.

In the light of experience, such arguments would, to say the least, appear to have been short-sighted. There is no desire to minimize the great achievements of the railroads nor the part which these facilities played in the growth and progress of the U. S. A. No man, woman or child lives in this country today, and probably very few who live in the world, but have in one way or another, received some benefit traceable to American railroads.

Certainly introduction of a new transportation system, which railroads admit by their opposition would furnish the people with lower cost shipping, is progress. To stand in the way of progress now is no more sensible than it would have been to have blocked the building of railroads years ago.

Another angle to the action of city council which certainly deserves comment is the fact that the railroads' resolution opposing the conveyor was read, approved and sent on its way at a single council meeting.

The document never went formally to any committee for study or investigation; there was no time allowed after its introduction for public discussion or airing of views. Surely, this is power politics, tossed haphazardly into the path of possible human progress, in the hope of serving the ends of a few.

'Armed Forces Day' Hereafter

ANNOUNCEMENT that four holidays are to be combined into one will be received with mixed emotions, as a long-time trend has been toward establishing additional holidays rather than reducing the number.

Greater unification of the nation's armed forces has been an objective for a number of years, and this need was given great emphasis by revelations made following the Pearl Harbor debacle on Dec. 7, 1941.

Instead of separate observance of Army day, Navy day, Marine Corps day and Air Force day, there is hereafter to be a single day set aside for inclusion of all of these services and to be known as "Armed Forces day"—with the actual date not yet selected.

It is the natural intent, in the event of war, for all of the armed services to work as a unit, but it seems equally important, during peacetime or in a period of military preparedness, that harmonious relations exist between the several branches of service, rather than that jealousy and dissension should be permitted to weaken the nation's defensive structure.

And then again, observance of one day on which to give recognition to the united armed forces, will tend to arouse greater public enthusiasm and participation than has been evidenced in designating a special day for each of the services.

Automobile Prices Dropping Slowly

WHILE slight price reductions have been announced by several automobile manufacturers, the appearance of downward trend has not yet been sufficient to arouse any particular enthusiasm among prospective buyers of what are now rather laughingly referred to as "low priced" cars.

That gradual return is being made to a "buyers' market," with restoration of a degree of competition, is evidenced by even the small price cuts that have been announced, with others in prospect, but it cannot be doubted that at least several million would-be purchasers of new cars are still priced out of the market.

Although supply has been catching up with demand—at the high price levels—it is noteworthy that nearly 13,000,000 of the passenger cars still in use are more than ten years old, while the average age of all cars in use is nearly nine years.

Many of these ancient cars would have been replaced years ago, had it not been for scarcity and prohibitive prices, and millions of motorists need and want new cars—but can't afford them.

Some of the materials going into production of motor cars have declined in price and are also more readily available. If there are no further wage raises, and if production per man hour can be increased, it would seem likely that further price reductions will be possible—a consummation most devoutly to be wished.

Russia seems to think that the Atlantic Pact is designed to start a war—but has anyone ever heard of an umbrella starting a rainstorm?

Viewing the National Scene

Working Behind Scene

By THOMAS L. STOKES

WASHINGTON — There are more ways than one by which special interests get what they want here, or try to get it.

Well known are their operations for and against legislation in Congress. Less well known, usually secretive, sometimes even insidious and frequently more effective is another method, which is to get personnel sympathetic to their interests in the numerous regulatory commissions here which administer and interpret laws enacted by Congress.

Here you find more behind-the-scene deals and wire-pulling than the public ever dreams of—what used to be called "invisible government."

There's a case in point just now involving the Federal Power Commission, which is charged with certain regulatory authority over electric utilities and natural gas to protect the public and consumer interest.

In the last Congress the FPC was subjected to a direct attack aimed at weakening its authority in both these regulatory fields—in the Miller utility bills and the Rizley-Moore natural-gas bill, respectively.

This was thwarted, luckily, and, incidentally, none of the sponsors of those measures is back in this Congress.

But others are carrying on the fight, both legislatively and in an attempt to influence the choice of personnel.

This latter affects Commissioner Thomas C. Buchanan who was appointed several months ago by President Truman to a vacancy on the five-member commission. His selection immediately aroused the utility, natural gas and allied oil interests.

Mr. Buchanan had proved himself vigilant in the public interest as a member of the Pennsylvania public utility commission some years ago from which he had retired to practice law in his home town, Beaver, Pa.

* * *

Effective Obstruction.

NO ACTION was taken on his nomination by the Republican Senate in the last Congress. President Truman resubmitted it on January 17, this year, to the Democratic Senate, nearly three months ago, and still no action has been taken. It has not even been considered by the interstate commerce committee.

An investigation brings the simple answer that utility, gas and oil pressure is still very heavy and very influential.

Mr. Buchanan, unwittingly, became a symbol in the fight in the last Congress over the Rizley-Moore bill to amend the natural-gas act. The explanation lies in a division within the FPC that developed over that bill.

Two commission members, Leland Olds and Claude L. Draper, opposed any amendments, while two others, Nelson Lee Smith, chairman, and Harrington Wimberly, joined in submitting amendments which it was contended before the interstate commerce committee would have about the same effect in weakening FPC's authority over natural gas as the Rizley-Moore bill.

In the midst of this controversy President Truman sent to the Senate the nomination of Burton N. Behling, special assistant to the commission and director of its natural-gas investigation, to fill the commission vacancy.

This provoked protests that Mr. Behling's views coincided with those of Commissioners Smith and Wimberly, which would produce a three-to-two division in favor of that philosophy.

Thereupon President Truman withdrew the Behling nomination and appointed Mr. Buchanan, which presumably would give a three-to-two division the other way.

This is the background of the present stalemate.

Washington Calling

Moving Toward What?

By MARQUIS CHILDS

THE IMPRESSION is of men walking on a knife-edge under the blazing light of history. On either side is darkness, the pit of despair. So much has been staked on the Atlantic Pact.

Already so much effort has gone into it. Almost without exception the foreign visitors—all of them men experienced in world affairs—say that they have never before been involved in a negotiation so complicated, difficult and long-drawn-out.

Yet, the effort has really only begun. This is a bridge to the future, a perilous crossing over, or it is nothing at all. You can't stand for very long balanced on a knife-edge.

One fact should be clearly recognized. The Pact could not have come about if it had not been for the continuing obstruction, the flagrant violation of the rights of peoples and nations, the naked hostility of the Soviet Union and its satellites.

The error of Molotov at the first conference in Paris in the summer of 1947 initiating the Marshall Plan has been compounded many times over. British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin tells a story about that conference which indicates that the Soviet decision to stay out may have been a close one. It may also throw significant light on the changes now taking place in the kremlin.

Molotov arrived in Paris for the first Marshall Plan talk with a staff of 122 assistants. This in itself seemed to indicate that the Soviets had decided for a time at least to play ball. If he were there merely to repeat the familiar Russian "No," he would hardly have bothered to bring so many helpers.

* * *

Made Abrupt Shift.

AT THE first closed session the foreign ministers of western Europe sat around the table eagerly aiting to learn the Soviet viewpoint. Molotov was one of the first speakers.

While he spoke with the customary Russian caution, he indicated clearly that his government would participate in the Marshall Plan.

Then came time for a brief recess. At this point a Soviet courier handed Molotov a sealed envelope. He quickly glanced at the contents and before the conferees could leave the table requested that the recess be not one hour but three hours.

At the next session following the recess, Molotov made a speech in which he took a line almost exactly the opposite of the one he had taken before. His government, he said, would oppose the Marshall Plan. Bevin believes that the note brought by the courier contained an order from Moscow to reverse the position previously taken.

Why? From then on the answers are speculative. The best guess is that the Kremlin feared that if the satellites were once drawn into the western orbit with the benefits of Marshall Plan aid, they could never be kept in subjection to Moscow.

But if the Russians had come in, it is most unlikely that Congress would have approved large-scale Marshall Plan aid. From within, the Soviet could have carried out continuous sabotage that would have guaranteed a breakdown of the whole plan.

That is the error which Soviet hostility has compounded over and over again. The communist-led strikes in France last fall made clear to the French people that the communist leadership would go to any lenghts to undermine western rehabilitation. They would even flood the coal mines and destroy one of France's chief assets.

It is against this background the angry protest out of Moscow must be taken. Behind that howl of rage there must be the realization that it could have been otherwise.

Soviet policy since the war has brought on the very thing the Kremlin professes to fear most. That is one of those ironies that make history so fascinating.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Barkley Reports To Cabinet on Outlook

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Vice President Barkley, who more and more is becoming the balance-wheel of the Truman administration, gave a significant report to the President at last week's cabinet meeting.

The Truman program on Capitol Hill, Barkley told the cabinet, was in much better shape than the public realizes. Furthermore, he predicted that a considerable part of the program will be passed at this session of Congress.

Barkley listed the housing bill, aid-to-education, reciprocal trade and school health as certain to pass. However, he was pessimistic about certain other important bills, especially the Taft-Hartley Act, which he said the administration did not have enough votes to repeal.

He was also pessimistic about civic rights, minimum wages—which Truman wants increased to 75 cents an hour—and the national health bill. This, the vice president told the cabinet, could not be passed this year.

Note — Betting among leaders of both parties is that no tax bill will be passed at this session—despite Mr. Truman's emphatic statement that he wanted taxes revised.

Missing Russian Diplomat.

IT WON'T be announced publicly, but the assistant secretary of the United Nations, Arcady Soboloff, has mysteriously faded out of the U. N. picture.

Soboloff, who is assistant to Secretary General Trygve Lie, went back to Russia on a vacation three months ago with the announced intention of remaining only weeks. But six weeks have spread out to double that time, and Soboloff has not returned.

Worried, Trygve Lie sent him several cables. No reply. Further investigation showed that Soboloff had carefully removed his files, all his personal belongings, and had drawn all the money due him.

Last week Trygve Lie came to the conclusion that his Russian assistant was deliberately ducking, so sent a cable notifying Soboloff that he was fired.

The Russian was the No. 2 Soviet diplomat in this country, second only to Gromyko. It's believed he will now occupy a top spot in Moscow's diplomatic command.

City Across the River.

HAVE been thinking of inviting all the congressmen who voted against the housing bill last year to see "City Across the River" when it opens in Washington. It would change a lot of votes. . .It isn't a housing picture, but about juvenile gang warfare, which wouldn't flourish if it wasn't for slum housing. . . The scene is set in Brooklyn—not only set, but actually shot there. Maxwell Shane, who produced the film, set up a microphone with a tape recorder in the markets, poolrooms and dance halls of Brooklyn to get accurate Brooklyn dialects and conversations. . .Then he interviewed 228 boys and from them picked three to play the lead roles in the movie. They hadn't had much acting experience, but they did a terrific job.

The movie features real shots of Brooklyn — tenements on South Third street, crowded blocks on Havemeyer street, the Marine Parkway bridge, Prospect Park, etc. . .Play is based on Irving Shulman's well-known story of juvenile gangsterdom, "The Amboy Dukes." . . .Tragic fact is that the story is too near the truth. As happens in the picture, a New York schoolteacher was actually killed by his students some time ago. And when you see the crowded living quarters in "City Across the River" you get some realization of why. . . .Senators, please note.

Strange 81st Congress.

ONE of the strange reversals of politics is the efficiency of the House of Representatives in the 81st Congress compared with the inefficiency of the Senate.

In the 80th Congress it was just the opposite. Then it was the Senate which functioned more smoothly—and more liberally. Now it is the House.

This reversal is due to two things: 1, the efficient leadership of Speaker Sam Rayburn and majority leader John McCormack of Massachusetts; 2, the progressive group of young Democrats elected last November, many of them from the South.

Rayburn and McCormack, old hand at the game, know exactly what they are doing every minute of the time. To anyone skilled in parliamentary procedure, their leadership is beautiful to behold.

As a result they are sending legislation to the Senate, and it is bulging with bills waiting to be passed.

Meanwhile, the Senate has been slowed down by a group teamed up with certain southern Democrats, who are consistently and cleverly undercutting almost every liberal piece of legislation to come before Congress.

More Cowboys Needed

By INEZ ROBB

FORT WORTH, Texas — In view of all the cowboy crooning over the radio and all the kids who demand cowboy suits for Christmas, it's rather surprising to learn there is a distinct shortage of apprentices in the cowboy business.

The cow poke ain't home on the range any more, podner. In fact, he just ain't. Cow men have a hard time gittin' enough hands to tend the critters, cows, that is.

Watt Reynolds, cow man and one of the nine heirs of the vast Reynolds spread (345,000 acres) kindly drawled me this information as we sat comfortably over libations in the elegant Blackamoor room of the Fort Worth club.

"Sure is hard to get cowboys," Reynolds opined. "The dream of being a cowpoke fades by the time a kid is 18." He is afraid the cowboy may someday join the buffalo, and then, where will the cow business be?

The Reynolds family and the Reynolds ranches are famous in Texas. It's a pioneer clan that came to this state with nothing but ambition and a will to work and has wound up in the cattle and chips.

"But my uncle used to tell me that many a time he could have traded a pair of boots for a section of Texas land — if only he's had the boots," Reynolds said.

* * *

Revealing the Facts.

DESPITE all the cowboy novels and motion pictures produced annually showing the last gasp wars between cow and sheep men, almost all cow men now have flocks of sheep, too.

Nor are all cow men picturesque Texans in big hats, frontier pants and ten-gallon hats. Scotch, English and New York capital owns some of the largest ranches in Texas. The SMS ranch, for instance, is owned by New York capital and operated by Swedes.

This I learned from Frank Reeves, a newspaper stock market analyst with a difference. The stock Reeves analyses is cattle rather than coupons.

He does a daily column "The Chuck Wagon" for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, but there all resemblance to New York newspapers' stock experts end. Reeves wears western pants, a Stetson, boots encrusted with manure and a heavy sun and wind burn rather than the eastern analyst's double-breasted blue job and pale, hunted look.

Reeves' beat is from Denver, Colo., to Brownsville, Texas, and from Chicago to the King Ranch, or wherever there are western cattle to write about. He travels a minimum of 50,000 miles annually to cover his beat.

Reeves is a talented man. He can sit a rail fence and chew tobacco with the men or lead out the ladies to cut a pigeon wing in any square dance.

When I asked Reeves, a former cowboy, what a cattle editor does, he grinned and said: "The best he kin."

Dave Boone Says:

A STANDOUT feature of the Atlantic Pact signing was the complete lack of color, fervor or gripping drama, more's the pity. Here was one of the great moments of history, yet not a speech was delivered in a way to stir men's hearts.

* * *

This was an occasion crying out for stirring utterance and vivid personalities. But even the President spoke from a script with no more fire than we have heard from Rotary club chairmen reporting on receipts from a clambake.

* * *

Oh, yes, there is merit, in simplicity, and oratory can go too far, but it doesn't seem to me that an event as important as the signing of the North Atlantic treaty should be on the dull side.

* * *

A little showmanship would have helped stir the world as it needs to be stirred. This was more than a routine ceremony marking the first pitch of the baseball season.

Timely Editorial

Cause of Excitement.

A Sears, Roebuck & Co. catalogue attracted crowds three blocks long and snarled traffic in downtown Belgrade, Yugoslavia. It had been received by the U. S. Information Library there.

The news spread rapidly. Translators were called in, figuring out costs in Yugoslavian currency. What a country, America! What a company, Sears, Roebuck! What marvelous and luxurious goods!

We think it was President Roosevelt who first publicly suggested a Sears catalogue would be our best ambassador. Nothing would tell better our high standard of living. Why not deluge the Russians with them?—Cleveland Press.

As Others See It

What's the Use?

Russia claims it has about 29,000 persons whose age exceeds 100 years. But why should anyone want to live that long in Russia?—Kansas City Star.

Nature's Way.

Very irksome is this thing of buying black dirt to build a lawn. How much more efficient is living downriver in a flood area, and finding the best part of a farm in your yard.—Detroit News.

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

A MAYO BROTHERS medico says many of our worries would disappear if we would relax in a bathtub. So 12 nations have tried wading right into the North Atlantic.

* * *

It will take a little time to get a report on how many worries they relaxed away.

* * *

But it just shows how things are going . . . Used to be we did some of our best singing in the tub and now we get into it to worry.

* * *

Some people even get in the bathtub with their current worries and add one . . . that they forgot to bolt the door.

* * *

And if we're going to use our bathtubs for consolation conclaves where are the next baritone baptisms going to be held?

* * *

There are many old-timers who will assert they heard better voices coming from the tub with the plug out than they hear on the radio with the plug in.

Farmer's Diary

Caring For Stray Dog

By CALVIN A. BYERS

OUR second boy, 14, has a strong love for animals. The creatures know it. He can do things to and for them that are sometimes amusing—or amazing.

He rode the young bull after he had removed a nail from the animal's foot; a squirrel ate from his hand; once he watched a herd of deer at close range, when they drank from the woodland rill; he sometimes goes off exploring alone, or sits fishing along Honey Creek watching wild ducks or crayfish.

When we saw him hurry to the barn with a remnant of meat from his dinner, we suspected that he had a new friend and confidant in the animal kingdom. Presently he came in, his fingers bloody, and washed his hands at the kitchen sink.

"Oh, it's a little she-dog with a bullet through its shoulder," he told his mother. "May I take out the menthiolate and disinfect the wound? I got the bullet out." Premission given, he turned at the door to add, "She came here yesterday. All she wants is a chance to get well. She shivered and was so afraid when I went into the barn that a fellow had to pity her! So I made her a bed between two bales of hay and fed her some milk when I did the milking last night. Today she feels better."

The half-grown mongrel-hound, white with brown spots, was around for a fortnight. Then our hospitality began to feel strained, for she got to eating eggs. Not that we blamed her, but our hens did not lay enough for our family and her!

She would lie in the sun on the sheltered side of the barn until an old hen cackled, then get up quietly and trot straight in, to see what she could find. She roamed over the slope for young rabbits, too, and often came up from the swamp looking pleased. I guess she found wild birds' eggs among the clumps of swampgrass. Too, she kept us awake at night, when she howled and barked at the moon.

"You'll have to call the dog catcher," his mother finally told him. "I just won't have that dog around here any longer."

"If we had a gun, you could shoot her," said one brother, grinning. But the one who had befriended the animal shook his head. "It's the time of year when it's good to stay alive. She can take care of herself, most anywhere."

He coaxed me to go with him for a little drive through the hills. At the far edge of a wooded clearing, along a lonely back road, he stopped the car and from the back seat produced the offending stray. She leaped out of his arms and went happily off into the grass, along a rabbit trail.

We paused long enough to admire the view through the vista of hills. Then we drove home. "She might mate with a fox, and have whelps even shrewder than she is," said my son, hopefully.

Headless Chieftain Raises Odd Puzzles

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala —(AP)—The place of the dead now has produced the mystery of the headless chieftain.

For years archeologists have been digging in and studying some 200 mounds, really tombs, on the site which 1,600 or 1,800 years ago was a Maya city of Kaminaljuyu. From fragments of bones, pottery and other items found they were attempting to chart some of the history of man's existence in the western hemisphere.

But Kaminaljuyu, which the Mayans called the Place of the Dead, gave up little of importance until last year diggers found a 200-pound slab of jade. A segment which probably weighed 100 pounds had been cut from the original block.

That produced a first-class mystery for jade is not native to the country—and the Mayans never discovered the principle of the wheel. How and from where could the block of jade have been transported?

Then, this year, another tomb was discovered in the jade block mound. This tomb contained the headless skeleton of the chieftain. It was flanked by the dusty remains of two children who obviously had been sacrificed to accompany him on his journey. Vessels within the tomb apparently had contained food for them.

Guatemalan officials called in Dr. A. V. Kidder and Edwin Shook of the Carnegie institute when native workmen uncovered the tomb. Besides turning up a mystery, the archeologists found a jade-ornamented mask headdress, which they said was unique among finds.

From the assembled evidence, the two American archeologists believe now that in ancient days the tomb was robbed and the chieftain's body decapitated, probably to obtain ornamental ear plugs.

Carnegie institute's Guatemala office now is making efforts to bring in a top-flight minerologist from the United States to examine the jade and to try to learn its origin. Apparently no expert has ever studied stones found in the nation's archeological diggings. The institute is hopeful a study will reveal the origins and travels of the Mayans in the entire area.

"After playing the good fellow during the campaign, he is now seized with the great shaking fit of conquerors—God speaks to him."

The paper said the President's speech was similar to Hitler's pre-war threats.

White Sox Material Is Pretty Thin

By LEO H. PETERSEN
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK — Of all the new Major league managers, none was a harder task than Jack Onslow of the Chicago White Sox.

His material is pretty thin and to make matters worse there are reports of dissension among the White Sox players because of the iron hand with which Onslow rules the club.

Those two factors lead most baseball men to believe that the White Sox are doomed to finish in the cellar again. In 1948 they were buried in last place, 44½ games off the pace.

Starting in the front office, the White Sox have embarked in a rebuilding campaign, but they do not expect it to pay any dividends this year. Frank Lane was installed as general manager in place of Leslie O'Connor and Onslow, with a Minor league background of experience, was named to pilot the team.

They have made changes in their playing talent and are working with a group of rookies, but the club is still far short of first division caliber. But they are trying, as shown by the fact that of the 36 players who reported for spring training, only 15 were with the club last year, and some of them for only a short time.

BETTER THAN RATED

Onslow believes his team is better than generally rated. He is looking to two rookies, outfielder Gus Zernial and first baseman Gordon Goldsberry, to provide the team with the spark it needs. Zernial, who hit .322 for Hollywood last year, and Dave Philley, a holdover, are the only outfielders who have won regular jobs. Another rookie, Grover Bowers, a .346 hitter with Memphis in 1948, has the inside track for the other job with Pat Seerey and Herb Adams, another rookie, in reserve.

Goldsberry, who hit .289 at Memphis last year, will open at first, but the rest of the infield posts still are open.

Despite his 40 years, Luke Appling appears to be the No. 1 shortstop and Floyd Baker, who hit only .215 last year, has been drawing the third base assignment. That leaves Don Kolloway and Cass Michaels for the second base job with the former sure of seeing regular service somewhere in the inner defense.

Steve Souchock, a Yankee castoff, will be retained to take over at first if Goldsberry should falter.

Ralph Weigel, who saw service in 66 games last year, and Joe Tipton, obtained from Cleveland, probably will share the catching duties.

Pitching promises to be Onslow's biggest headache. He doesn't have a hurler on the staff who had a winning percentage in the Majors last year.

THREE STARTERS

Bill Wight, Howard Judson and Orval Grove are the only hurlers sure of starting assignments. Behind them are Al Gettel, a failure with the Yankees and Indians; Walter Pierce, who couldn't make the grade with the Tigers; Marino Pieretti, who couldn't stick with the lowly Senators; and Randy Gumpert, who won only two while losing six last year.

Most of the rookie hurlers appear to be at least a year away —and so do the White Sox so far as a fighting chance for a first division berth is concerned.

Robinson Must Battle Gavilan

NEW YORK — (UP) — Ray Robinson today was handed a take-it-or-leave-it proposition to defend his wealterweight championship against Kid Gavilan.

Managing Director Harry Markson of th 20th century club conferred with Robinson yesteray concerning a June title match with Gavilan but they reached no agreement, although Robinson previously had promised a decision. "Ray knows our terms now," Markson said. "From now on it's up to him."

Owens to Pilot Baseball Teams

CHICAGO — (UP) — Jesse Owens, former Ohio State track star and member of the 1936 U. S. Olympic team, has become director of sports and sales for the Leo Rose Clothing company here.

Owens, who formerly had been associated with the Harlem Globetrotters Basketball team, said today he will manage the Brown Bombers Baseball team for Rose. He also plans to start "booster" teams among boys in underprivileged neighborhoods.

Gretchen Goes Back to Third

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — (AP) — The six-year reign of Gretchen Merrill as Queen of U. S. figure skating is tottering. But Dick Button, King of the sport since 1946, is well on his way to a fourth championship.

The Boston blond ice artist placed their yesterday in the compulsory figures phase of the 1949 championships. They count 60 per cent toward deciding the winner. She trailed behind Yvonne Sherman of Brooklyn and Andra McLaughlin of Colorado Springs and New York.

Button, Englewood, N. J.,star, was judged first by all five judges in the compulsory figures of the men's division. Jimmy Grogan of Berkeley, Calif., runnerup to Button in 1948, was placed second by all five judges. Third place went to Hayes Allen Jenkins, 16, of Cleveland, 1943 national junior champion.

Dreams of Youth Pay Off For Bowler Andy Varipapa

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK—(UP)—The dreams of a 14-year-old immigrant boy still were paying off today for Andy Varipapa.

There are some 20,000,000 ten-pin addicts in the United States and Varipapa's position in this heterogeneous horde can be measured accurately by the fact that he just has been named "bowler of the year."

That takes in a fair sized chunk of territory. But it is no surprise to Varipapa. He admits, in his frankly bombastic manner, that he is on the colossal side of "sensational."

Adjectives and Andy go well together, whether he is talking or mowing down the maples. It ranks as no minor miracle to Varipapa that at 54 he stands at the top of the ladder and is the two-time match game champion.

He planned it all back in the dim days 40 years ago when, still attempting to master the language after coming here from his native Calabria, Italy, he was a meat market delivery boy. The rump roasts, pigs feet, sausages and other Brooklyn standbys often were late arriving at their kitchen destinations because Andy was looking in at the local bowling alleys.

PLAYS BASEBALL

There was a period when Andy almost allowed himself to be sidetracked from his first love. Young Andy learned that ball players rated higher than bowlers and soon he was a shortstop with a semi-pro team. Then he discovered that prize fighters were local lions and became a promising lightweight.

But it was about that time that Andy met the future Mrs. Varipapa. And she took a firm stand against fisticuffs. So Andy in the interests of matrimony turned from scrambling ears to scrambling pins.

It was a wise choice, as the years have proved. At an age where boxers and ball players are living with their memories, Andy is still making them. And he gives no indication that he is preparing to step down.

This after a career in which he has made a dozen movie shorts; rolled 65 perfect 300 games; posted the highest all-time average in ABC history and rolled to dozens of records and championships.

Several of those 300 games were performances typical of the self-styled "world's greatest bowler."

In one he rolled eight successive strikes, was dared into throwing left handed and made his ninth strike, and then finished out a flawless game right handed.

Promoter Signs Lesnevich, Maxim For Title Match

CINCINNATI —(INS)— Cincinnati Promoter Sam Becker announced today he had signed Gus Lesnevich and Joe Maxim to go 15 rounds for the world's light heavyweight championship May 23 in the Queen City.

Becker said in a phone call from Paterson, N. J., he had been told the National Boxing association would recognize the winner as champion despite the fact that England's Freddy Mills now holds the title.

The Cincinnati promoter said NBA Chairman Abe Green told him the NBA would recognize the bout as a go for the title because Mills had failed to meet Lesnevich in a return bout within six months after winning a 15-round decision.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

India Wary of Joining East-West Scrap

NEW DELHI, India — (AP) — India is looking warily to the north and east, watching the advances of communism that may engulf all the rest of the Asian mainland.

As yet, she shows neither alarm nor nervousness. India insists she isn't mad at anybody. Her government, in power for less than two years and still an interim administration because the new constitution is not yet effective, has become the most stable and secure in Asia.

The Indian government has demonstrated its opposition to communism. It has dealth swiftly and sternly with communist attempts to create disorders and disruptions which would weaken its authority. While it pushes several socialistic projects it also has gone to some lengths to encourage capitalism, both Indian and foreign. It has shown reluctance to cut all India's connections with the British commonwealth.

But countering all such signs of solidarity with the western democracies are repeated statements from the government that India has no interest in joining either side in any struggle between the east and west.

In his latest public review of his government's foreign policy, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru said:

"Our general policy has been to try to cultivate friendly relations with all countries. Fortunately, India has inherited no past hostility from any country.

"India is too big a country to be bound down to any country, however big. India is going to be, and is bound to be, a country that counts in world affairs, not I hope in the military sense, but in many other senses which are more important, more effective, in the end."

OHIO RIVER BUSY

PARKERSBURG, W. VA. (UP) — Ohio River traffic is as busy as ever. The local lockmaster, C. L. Yates, said if the 9,783 barges that moved past here during 1948 were laid end to end, they would reach from Parkersburg to Chicago. They carried 4,055,100 tons of cargo, including everything from matches to tar.

Seek Boost For World's Food Supply

U. N. Agencies Draw Up Program

GENEVA —(UP)— Two United Nations agencies have drawn up a program to increase world food production. Joint action is sought to introduce better agricultural methods and reduce diseases hindering farm output in underdeveloped areas.

The Food and Agricultural Organization and the World Health Organization describe their project as in accord with President Truman's inaugural promise to make technical skills available for the growth and improvement of backyard areas.

The American message called for co-operation of the United Nations in the drive.

The two U. N. agencies are asking $10,000,000 for their joint action program. They hope it will get under way by 1950.

In a report on the project, FAO and WHO said world food production will reach pre-war levels by 1951, granted good harvests. But because the world's population is 150,000,000 greater, supplies "will be substantially below the highly unsatisfactorily pre-war food levels," the report says.

The report adds that the world food shortages "is the major continuing factor which profoundly prejudices health, welfare and any hopes of social stability."

WHO has found that food shortages are especially severe where malaria and other "relatively easily preventable diseases" have depleted the ability of the population to work. It finds there are over 300,000,000 cases of malaria annually with at least 3,000,000 deaths, mainly in agricultural areas.

A "vicious circle" exists in many underdeveloped areas, according to the report. Low standards of health prevent workers from producing. In many such areas they have never even known good health. New weapons such as DDT and penicillin could be used effectively against malaria, plague, typhus, and other diseases holding back farm output, according to WHO.

Fear Four Lost at Sea

BALTIMORE — (AP) — A young Massachusetts sailboat builder, his wife, and their two sons may have been aboard a schooner abandoned in heavy seas off the South Carolina coast.

Marine sources in the Bahamas reported a boat answering the description of the derelict left Nassau April 1 for Charleston, S. C. Believed aboard were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parrott and their two sons, David, 4, and Steven, 1.

The derelict was found drifting in the gulf stream two days ago by the tanker SS Richard J. Cleveland. The Cleveland's master said there was no sign of life on the gear-littered deck and no response to repeated blasts of the tanker's whistle.

Mrs. Hadley Parrott, living here temporarily while her husband goes to medical school, said her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parrott, planned to leave Nassau about April 1 for Charleston in their 56-foot, two-masted schooner, the Keewatin.

Display Beetles

ITHACA, N. Y. — (UP) — A collection of 31,000 beetles, including many scarce specimens, has been placed on display at Cornell University. The collection belonged to the late Kenyon K. chamberlain, assistant New York state entomologist.

Helicopters are now being used by archeologists in their hunt for ancient relics.

Ike Derides Red's Rise In America

General Claims No Need For Fear

KEY WEST, FLA. — (UP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower says there is no need for Americans to fear a rise of communism in the United States.

He told a vacation news conference here that "in spite of the gripes that are always bound to be heard, the vast majority of our 140,000,000 people are fully aware that we have the best goldarned standard of living and way of life in the world."

Gen. Ike held his news conference on the 11th day of his rest and recuperation here from the effects of a severe stomach ailment. He urged a spirit of optimism and a constant awareness of the strength of the United States.

He warned against "indifference and failure to be alert" against communism but said in his opinion "there is absolutely no mass rotting from within."

"This country is the strongest temporal power in the world today, with the best in industry, armed forces, resources and the will of free men," Eisenhower said.

"The United States has the finest army, navy and air force and they are headed by men with brains."

The men heading the three branches of the service, Gen. Omar Bradley, Adm. Louis Denfield and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, chiefs of staff of the army, navy and air force, are scheduled to arrive here by plane to confer with Eisenhower. He said Defense Secretary Louis Johnson was expected in "a day or two."

Law Officer Threatened

CINCINNATI — (UP) — Hamilton county Sheriff Dan Tehan disclosed yesterday he had received a note threatening death to him and his family unless he "lays off" horse race handbooks in suburban Elmwood place.

The handwritten, unsigned note said:

"If you don't stay out of Elmwood, and if you close the handbooks there, you won't live long. Neither will your wife or kids. We will finish you off with bullets or we can throw a bomb in your home."

Sheriff Tehan, father of three children, said he threw the note in a waste basket "like I do all anonymous mail."

"I'm not worried," he added.

Killer Faces Death Penalty

HILLSBORO — (INS) — Mahlon Wisecup, confessed killer of Grant Nichols, will die in the Ohio penitentiary electric chair.

Seven men and five women agreed yesterday that the 49-year-old Wisecup killed the man with whom he lived and found him guilty of first degree murder, without a recommendation for mercy. This makes the death penalty mandatory.

Wisecup was accused of shooting Nichols with a shotgun and stuffing his body under the floorboards of his Carmel Hills cabin home.

City To Receive $15,489 From State

A total of $1,774,374 was distributed among the cities. Galion received $3,836, the auditor reported.

Find World's Lightest Solid

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — Scientists today claimed development of the world's lightest solid—a foam-like plastic far lighter than the meringue on mom's pie.

Westinghouse Electric corporation's research laboratory scientists announced the development. They said the plastic is lighter in specific gravity than the lightest type of fiber glass now known. Fiber glass is believed to be the lightest solid previously known, they added.

The plastic also is 10 to 20 times lighter than pie meringue — previously rated fourth lightest solid. That is, of course, if the meringue was mom's best.

Work Starts On Modern UN 'Home'

Truman to Lay Cornerstone

NEW YORK—(UP)—Seventeen hundred piles are being driven through the coarse quartz-mica strata of New York's East river front to support the $65,000,000, 39-story permanent home of the United Nations.

Work on the driving of the piles, expected to take six to eight months, was started early this month under a $25,000,000 contract.

The contract calls for construction of the first unit of the UN center, the secretariat building, and the foundations for the General Assembly and the meeting hall area containing the council chambers and conference rooms.

The huge structure, whose grounds will extend from 44th to 48th street along Franklin D. Roosevelt drive, skirting the river, is expected to accommodate approximately 5,000 persons in the offices of the UN when it is completed some two years from now.

President Truman will lay the cornerstone of the building on April 10.

The UN buildings are being constructed on ground where the shore line once formed a small, rock-bound cove called Turtle Bay. Old Manhattan records show that a creek draining the southerly end of Central Park once emptied into this bay.

The cove now is filled in behind a rock-filled timber crib and this crib may have to be dug out and replaced with earth before the piles can be sunk there.

The secretariat building, tallest of the ground, will rest partly on bedrock and partly on concrete piers. Where bedrock is deeper than 20 feet, steel piles are used instead of concrete piers.

Senator Seeks Stronger Spy Curbing Legislation For U. S.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Sen. Eastland (D) Miss., demanded yesterday that the administration broaden anti - spy legislation to compel persons trained in espionage or sabotage by the communist party to register with the Justice department.

The bill — other parts of which were criticized as being too tight — came under fire by Eastland when it was disclosed that trainees of the American communist party would be exempt from registration as foreign-trained potential spies.

The measure being studied by Eastland's Senate Judiciary subcommittee would require registration of persons trained in espionage or tactics of a foreign government or a "foreign political party."

Eastland declared that under the bill the government would have the burden of proving in any prosecution not only that the person had received spy training, but that the American communists are "a foreign political party."

Peyton Ford, assistant to the attorney general said it would be "pretty difficult" to rewrite the provision to cover trainees of the American communist party, but he agreed to try.

Raps Milk Discrepancy

COLUMBUS — (INS) — A wide difference between the prices paid for fluid milk and milk products is threatening to force many Ohio dairy farmers out of business.

The situation was brought to light by C. F. Christian, extension marketing specialist at Ohio State university, who pointed out milk product prices had declined twice as fast as fluid milk prices.

Christian said that producers supplying milk to condeseries took a cut of $1.16 per 100 pounds from January of 1948 to January of 1949. At the same time 21 fluid milk markets in the state dropped only 62 cents.

Compromise Hinted Underway on Controversial Oleo Bill

Committee Still Holds 'Hot Potato'

House Vote Due After April 20

COLUMBUS — (INS) — A move to compromise the highly-controversial colored oleomargarine bill was reliably reported to be underway in the House of Representatives today.

The oleo bill, which squeezed through the Senate by an 18-14 vote a month ago yesterday after an earlier defeat was reconsidered, currently is bottled up in the House Rules committee. There is no prospect of a vote in the House before April 20 at the earliest.

This delay would give both supporters and opponents time to work out a deal. However, neither side is talking since — like most deals — the compromise could fall through.

However, one of the highest of the House leaders told International News service that a compromise was being discussed on these lines:

1. — The serving of colored oleo in restaurants would be either banned entirely or limited to triangular pats, and

2. — The use of preservatives in colored oleo would be discontinued.

City solons backing the bill might go along with the first provision — but the second could prove the real stumbling block.

At the present time oleo manufacturers may preserve their product by the addition of one-tenth of one per cent benzoate of soda — while state law bans the use of any preservative in milk, butter or dairy products.

Actually, the largest central Ohio manufacturer of oleo reported, oleo made with cottonseed or soybean oil will keep for many months — just as butter will — without benzoate of soda added. In fact, he said, part of their products omit the preservative.

However, oleos made with cocoanut or palm kernel oils — both imported products — are apt to become rancid without the benzoate of soda.

This the second part of the proposal seems to be a roundabout way of writing into the law a ban on the use of any but domestic oils.

Workers Start Moving Pump To New Clear Fork Station

City workers today were to start the job of moving one of the three large high-lift pumps from Maxwell pumping station to the new Clear Fork station.

Movement of the pump was postponed on March 17 and March 24 when trouble developed, but city officials say the troubles have been corrected.

The first delay was caused by a leak in a line from the new pumping station to the city. Second postponement was necessary when it was discovered concrete poured around the leak had not set.

Eventually all three pumps will be moved from the Maxwell station to the new station.

One pump will be moved at a time so the remaining two can pump water from the city's wells to Woodland reservoir from where it goes to the city.

Everything is in readiness at the new Clear Fork station to receive the pump, Mayor Roy W. Vaughn said, and it is planned to complete the move and deliver water to Woodland reservoir by Friday night.

4-State Search Launched For Missing Girl, Kidnap Suspect

—his missing daughter—Kenneth J. Nordstrom, county prosecutor and Sheriff H. F. Rickenbrod have joined with Chief Smith in the search. Unless the girl can be returned to Ashland by May 11, officers said they may be compelled to release Benepe without trial.

Benepe came under suspicion on March 13 when the daughter complained to school authorities. Police were notified and the father was indicted on March 30 and confined in the Ashland county jail. The children were then placed in the county home. The children formerly lived with their father and step-mother.

SAW GIRL LEAVE

"We can't feel the girl deliberately ran away by herself because she indicated she was happy at the children's home and expressed a desire to stay there rather than return to the home of her father and step-mother," Prosecutor Nordstrom said today.

Witnesses have told police of seeing the girl leave the school grounds in company with a woman whom police now believe was Mrs. Horton. Officers said the girl may have been abducted by Hortons to prevent her from bringing the Horton name into the trial of her father.

Ashland city and county authorities today urged residents of the area to be on the look-out for both the girl and Horton.

The girl is described as five feet, three inches tall, weighing 100 pounds, and having brown hair, worn in a long bob, and brown eyes. Officers said the child gave the appearance of suffering from malnutrition. When last seen she was wearing a blue-green corduroy coat, white skirt and blouse with a black ribbon at the neck and black shoes.

Horton is described as between 25 and 30 years of age, five feet, seven inches tall, 145 pounds in weight, with dark hair, dark eyes, sharp features and small mustache. Chief Smith said Horton had served time in a Texas prison for forgery and that his wife was given a two-year probationary term in Texas. Horton was dishonorably discharged from the navy in 1945, was arrested in Amarillo, Texas and later in Kentucky where he escaped from jail. He was first seen in Ashland in November, 1947 when he applied for relief for himself and his family.

The Horton car, which may have been used in the kidnaping, is described as a grey, 1939 Pontiac sedan, bearing license VJ 549.

City Library To Train Apprentice

Offer Open To County College Girl

The Memorial board of the Mansfield Public Library will sponsor a five-week summer apprenticeship at the library for a Richland county college girl who meets the qualifications set up by the board.

In making the announcement, Miss Lois MacKellar, chief librarian, said the library hopes to select an apprentice early this year so time of training can be arranged to suit both the girl and the library staff.

In past years the library has contacted high schools in the county for lists of graduates now in college who might be interested in the program. This year Miss MacKellar is asking interested girls to write letters of application. Letters should be sent to the library not later than April 23.

Candidates should include in their letters their name, local address, college, and age. They should also give the name of their high school and year of graduation, the number of hours of college work completed, average high school and college grade, college major, foreign languages studied, whether they are planning on a career, fields they have considered, and work experience.

The letter should include mention of the earliest time the candidate could come to Mansfield for an interview and a letter of reference from a member of her college faculty.

MUST RANK HIGH

The girl chosen will be selected on the basis of scholarship, personality, and interest. Her high school and college grades must show that she has been in the upper third of her class. Personality and interest will be judged by Miss MacKellar in personal interviews with the candidates.

The program calls for five 40-hour weeks. The Memorial board will pay the apprentice $120 for the time she spends training.

The apprentice will spend one week in each of the four main departments of the library working under the supervision of a graduate librarian. These departments include the catalog room, the children's room, the reference department, and the county division.

The fifth week the chief librarian will coordinate the apprentice's experiences by supervising a week of general library work. If possible, a visit to the School of Library Science at Western Reserve university in Cleveland will be arranged during this final week.

Ohio Budget Under Fire

'Lausche Welched,' GOP Leaders Cry

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Republican legislative leaders today attacked Governor Lausche's record 649 million dollar budget and charged that the governor "has welched on his promise to the people of Ohio."

A joint statement of Sen. Roscoe Walcutt (R-Columbus) and Rep. C. William O'Neill (R-Washington), minority leaders in the Senate and House, asserted:

"One more economy budget like this and we will find ourselves economized right into bankruptcy.

The statement—released from Republican state headquarters—charged the governor with repudiating platform pledges to provide more money for schools, local governments and state employes. The Republicans then reversed their field and asserted:

"He (Lausche) promised thrift and economy in government. Like President Truman, he has delivered to the legislature the greatest spending program in the 146-year history of Ohio"

Experts Predict Packaged Information For Farmers

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Department of Agriculture has so much information on farming it can't tell the farmers about it fast enough.

It is working on a new plan that officials hope may revolutionize farming.

They want to bring together all the latest scientific information on each major crop. They want to "package" this information so each package would be tailor-made for one region of the country.

One of these packages would give farmers an almost magic formula for getting the greatest yield from his farm. It would suggest what to plant and how to plant it.

Some officials believe a new method of reaching the farmers must be created, instead of the usual written pamphlets and bulletins.

They have proposed that pilot farms be set up in each region of the U. S.

All the latest scientific information would be "packaged" in these farms. Each regional farm would become a living "book" where the farmers of that region could read the information in the way farmers understand best—results with groving crops and livestock.

Dr. P. V. Cardon, administrator for the agricultural research administration, says the department has two acute problems:

1. Keeping farm scientists themselves abreast of the research work going on all over the world.

2. Getting this information to the farmer quickly so he can apply it and increase his crops, feed more people and make more money.

Farmers in the Columbia river valley in the northwest were accustomed to producing about 45 bushels of corn per acre. This indicated that nitrogen fertilizer in larger quantities produced larger crops, that water applied at the right time produced larger crops, that more seeds planted to each acre produced larger crops.

Then the scientists made a startling discovery. When they put all of these facts together they grew a corn crop of 193 bushels per acre, more than four times as large as farmers had been getting.

Had ony one part of the recipe been altered the size of the corn crop would have been changed.

This is just one crop, corn, and the methods were made-to-order for only one region. The government has thousands of these "bits" of information for hundreds of crops.

Council's Opposition To Conveyor

MANSFIELD city council's action in serving as the voice of the railroads to oppose the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio river conveyor belt appears difficult to understand.

The basis of the railroads' opposition—now made officially the opposition of Mansfield's people, since the council speaks officially for our citizenry—appears to be this:

The conveyor would haul some of the freight now hauled by railroads; the conveyor belt would create no new commerce; "widespread unemployment" would result due to loss of railroad freight shipment; abandonment of railroads and loss of railroad revenue would "substantially" reduce tax revenues, with resulting loss to schools, subdivisions, the state, etc.

In the light of history, no sane man would attempt to argue, and no intelligent city council would pass a resolution condemning the building of railroads.

Yet when railroads were first extending their steel lines and smoking locomotives across the face of the nation, the same arguments, or very similar ones, might have applied—such as:

Thousands of teamsters and wagon-makers would be thrown out of work; many dealers in horses and mules would be put out of business; grain and feed dealers would be hard hit due to loss of horse and mule feed consumption, etc.

In the light of experience, such arguments would, to say the least, appear to have been short-sighted. There is no desire to minimize the great achievements of the railroads nor the part which these facilities played in the growth and progress of the U. S. A. No man, woman or child lives in this country today, and probably very few who live in the world, but have in one way or another, received some benefit traceable to American railroads.

Certainly introduction of a new transportation system, which railroads admit by their opposition would furnish the people with lower cost shipping, is progress. To stand in the way of progress now is no more sensible than it would have been to have blocked the building of railroads years ago.

Another angle to the action of city council which certainly deserves comment is the fact that the railroads' resolution opposing the conveyor was read, approved and sent on its way at a single council meeting.

The document never went formally to any committee for study or investigation; there was no time allowed after its introduction for public discussion or airing of views. Surely, this is power politics, tossed haphazardly into the path of possible human progress, in the hope of serving the ends of a few.

'Armed Forces Day' Hereafter

ANNOUNCEMENT that four holidays are to be combined into one will be received with mixed emotions, as a long-time trend has been toward establishing additional holidays rather than reducing the number.

Greater unification of the nation's armed forces has been an objective for a number of years, and this need was given great emphasis by revelations made following the Pearl Harbor debacle on Dec. 7, 1941.

Instead of separate observance of Army day, Navy day, Marine Corps day and Air Force day, there is hereafter to be a single day set aside for inclusion of all of these services and to be known as "Armed Forces day"—with the actual date not yet selected.

It is the natural intent, in the event of war, for all of the armed services to work as a unit, but it seems equally important, during peacetime or in a period of military preparedness, that harmonious relations exist between the several branches of service, rather than that jealousy and dissension should be permitted to weaken the nation's defensive structure.

And then again, observance of one day on which to give recognition to the united armed forces, will tend to arouse greater public enthusiasm and participation than has been evidenced in designating a special day for each of the services.

Automobile Prices Dropping Slowly

WHILE slight price reductions have been announced by several automobile manufacturers, the appearance of downward trend has not yet been sufficient to arouse any particular enthusiasm among prospective buyers of what are now rather laughingly referred to as "low priced" cars.

That gradual return is being made to a "buyers' market," with restoration of a degree of competition, is evidenced by even the small price cuts that have been announced, with others in prospect, but it cannot be doubted that at least several million would-be purchasers of new cars are still priced out of the market.

Although supply has been catching up with demand—at the high price levels—it is noteworthy that nearly 13,000,000 of the passenger cars still in use are more than ten years old, while the average age of all cars in use is nearly nine years.

Many of these ancient cars would have been replaced years ago, had it not been for scarcity and prohibitive prices, and millions of motorists need and want new cars—but can't afford them.

Some of the materials going into production of motor cars have declined in price and are also more readily available. If there are no further wage raises, and if production per man hour can be increased, it would seem likely that further price reductions will be possible—a consummation most devoutly to be wished.

Russia seems to think that the Atlantic Pact is designed to start a war—but has anyone ever heard of an umbrella starting a rainstorm?

Viewing the National Scene

Working Behind Scene

By THOMAS L. STOKES

WASHINGTON — There are more ways than one by which special interests get what they want here, or try to get it.

Well known are their operations for and against legislation in Congress. Less well known, usually secretive, sometimes even insidious and frequently more effective is another method, which is to get personnel sympathetic to their interests in the numerous regulatory commissions here which administer and interpret laws enacted by Congress.

Here you find more behind-the-scene deals and wire-pulling than the public ever dreams of—what used to be called "invisible government."

There's a case in point just now involving the Federal Power Commission, which is charged with certain regulatory authority over electric utilities and natural gas to protect the public and consumer interest.

In the last Congress the FPC was subjected to a direct attack aimed at weakening its authority in both these regulatory fields—in the Miller utility bills and the Rizley-Moore natural-gas bill, respectively.

This was thwarted, luckily, and, incidentally, none of the sponsors of those measures is back in this Congress.

But others are carrying on the fight, both legislatively and in an attempt to influence the choice of personnel.

This latter affects Commissioner Thomas C. Buchanan who was appointed several months ago by President Truman to a vacancy on the five-member commission. His selection immediately aroused the utility, natural gas and allied oil interests.

Mr. Buchanan had proved himself vigilant in the public interest as a member of the Pennsylvania public utility commission some years ago from which he had retired to practice law in his home town, Beaver, Pa.

* * *

Effective Obstruction.

NO ACTION was taken on his nomination by the Republican Senate in the last Congress. President Truman resubmitted it on January 17, this year, to the Democratic Senate, nearly three months ago, and still no action has been taken. It has not even been considered by the interstate commerce committee.

An investigation brings the simple answer that utility, gas and oil pressure is still very heavy and very influential.

Mr. Buchanan, unwittingly, became a symbol in the fight in the last Congress over the Rizley-Moore bill to amend the natural-gas act. The explanation lies in a division within the FPC that developed over that bill.

Two commission members, Leland Olds and Claude L. Draper, opposed any amendments, while two others, Nelson Lee Smith, chairman, and Harrington Wimberly, joined in submitting amendments which it was contended before the interstate commerce committee would have about the same effect in weakening FPC's authority over natural gas as the Rizley-Moore bill.

In the midst of this controversy President Truman sent to the Senate the nomination of Burton N. Behling, special assistant to the commission and director of its natural-gas investigation, to fill the commission vacancy.

This provoked protests that Mr. Behling's views coincided with those of Commissioners Smith and Wimberly, which would produce a three-to-two division in favor of that philosophy.

Thereupon President Truman withdrew the Behling nomination and appointed Mr. Buchanan, which presumably would give a three-to-two division the other way.

This is the background of the present stalemate.

Washington Calling

Moving Toward What?

By MARQUIS CHILDS

THE IMPRESSION is of men walking on a knife-edge under the blazing light of history. On either side is darkness, the pit of despair. So much has been staked on the Atlantic Pact.

Already so much effort has gone into it. Almost without exception the foreign visitors—all of them men experienced in world affairs—say that they have never before been involved in a negotiation so complicated, difficult and long-drawn-out.

Yet, the effort has really only begun. This is a bridge to the future, a perilous crossing over, or it is nothing at all. You can't stand for very long balanced on a knife-edge.

One fact should be clearly recognized. The Pact could not have come about if it had not been for the continuing obstruction, the flagrant violation of the rights of peoples and nations, the naked hostility of the Soviet Union and its satellites.

The error of Molotov at the first conference in Paris in the summer of 1947 initiating the Marshall Plan has been compounded many times over. British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin tells a story about that conference which indicates that the Soviet decision to stay out may have been a close one. It may also throw significant light on the changes now taking place in the kremlin.

Molotov arrived in Paris for the first Marshall Plan talk with a staff of 122 assistants. This in itself seemed to indicate that the Soviets had decided for a time at least to play ball. If he were there merely to repeat the familiar Russian "No," he would hardly have bothered to bring so many helpers.

* * *

Made Abrupt Shift.

AT THE first closed session the foreign ministers of western Europe sat around the table eagerly aiting to learn the Soviet viewpoint. Molotov was one of the first speakers.

While he spoke with the customary Russian caution, he indicated clearly that his government would participate in the Marshall Plan.

Then came time for a brief recess. At this point a Soviet courier handed Molotov a sealed envelope. He quickly glanced at the contents and before the conferees could leave the table requested that the recess be not one hour but three hours.

At the next session following the recess, Molotov made a speech in which he took a line almost exactly the opposite of the one he had taken before. His government, he said, would oppose the Marshall Plan. Bevin believes that the note brought by the courier contained an order from Moscow to reverse the position previously taken.

Why? From then on the answers are speculative. The best guess is that the Kremlin feared that if the satellites were once drawn into the western orbit with the benefits of Marshall Plan aid, they could never be kept in subjection to Moscow.

But if the Russians had come in, it is most unlikely that Congress would have approved large-scale Marshall Plan aid. From within, the Soviet could have carried out continuous sabotage that would have guaranteed a breakdown of the whole plan.

That is the error which Soviet hostility has compounded over and over again. The communist-led strikes in France last fall made clear to the French people that the communist leadership would go to any lenghts to undermine western rehabilitation. They would even flood the coal mines and destroy one of France's chief assets.

It is against this background the angry protest out of Moscow must be taken. Behind that howl of rage there must be the realization that it could have been otherwise.

Soviet policy since the war has brought on the very thing the Kremlin professes to fear most. That is one of those ironies that make history so fascinating.

Barkley Reports To Cabinet on Outlook

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — Vice President Barkley, who more and more is becoming the balance-wheel of the Truman administration, gave a significant report to the President at last week's cabinet meeting.

The Truman program on Capitol Hill, Barkley told the cabinet, was in much better shape than the public realizes. Furthermore, he predicted that a considerable part of the program will be passed at this session of Congress.

Barkley listed the housing bill, aid-to-education, reciprocal trade and school health as certain to pass. However, he was pessimistic about certain other important bills, especially the Taft-Hartley Act, which he said the administration did not have enough votes to repeal.

He was also pessimistic about civic rights, minimum wages—which Truman wants increased to 75 cents an hour—and the national health bill. This, the vice president told the cabinet, could not be passed this year.

Note — Betting among leaders of both parties is that no tax bill will be passed at this session—despite Mr. Truman's emphatic statement that he wanted taxes revised.

Missing Russian Diplomat.

IT WON'T be announced publicly, but the assistant secretary of the United Nations, Arcady Soboloff, has mysteriously faded out of the U. N. picture.

Soboloff, who is assistant to Secretary General Trygve Lie, went back to Russia on a vacation three months ago with the announced intention of remaining only weeks. But six weeks have spread out to double that time, and Soboloff has not returned.

Worried, Trygve Lie sent him several cables. No reply. Further investigation showed that Soboloff had carefully removed his files, all his personal belongings, and had drawn all the money due him.

Last week Trygve Lie came to the conclusion that his Russian assistant was deliberately ducking, so sent a cable notifying Soboloff that he was fired.

The Russian was the No. 2 Soviet diplomat in this country, second only to Gromyko. It's believed he will now occupy a top spot in Moscow's diplomatic command.

City Across the River.

HAVE been thinking of inviting all the congressmen who voted against the housing bill last year to see "City Across the River" when it opens in Washington. It would change a lot of votes. . .It isn't a housing picture, but about juvenile gang warfare, which wouldn't flourish if it wasn't for slum housing. . . The scene is set in Brooklyn—not only set, but actually shot there. Maxwell Shane, who produced the film, set up a microphone with a tape recorder in the markets, poolrooms and dance halls of Brooklyn to get accurate Brooklyn dialects and conversations. . .Then he interviewed 228 boys and from them picked three to play the lead roles in the movie. They hadn't had much acting experience, but they did a terrific job.

The movie features real shots of Brooklyn — tenements on South Third street, crowded blocks on Havemeyer street, the Marine Parkway bridge, Prospect Park, etc. . .Play is based on Irving Shulman's well-known story of juvenile gangsterdom, "The Amboy Dukes." . . .Tragic fact is that the story is too near the truth. As happens in the picture, a New York schoolteacher was actually killed by his students some time ago. And when you see the crowded living quarters in "City Across the River" you get some realization of why. . . .Senators, please note.

Strange 81st Congress.

ONE of the strange reversals of politics is the efficiency of the House of Representatives in the 81st Congress compared with the inefficiency of the Senate.

In the 80th Congress it was just the opposite. Then it was the Senate which functioned more smoothly—and more liberally. Now it is the House.

This reversal is due to two things: 1, the efficient leadership of Speaker Sam Rayburn and majority leader John McCormack of Massachusetts; 2, the progressive group of young Democrats elected last November, many of them from the South.

Rayburn and McCormack, old hand at the game, know exactly what they are doing every minute of the time. To anyone skilled in parliamentary procedure, their leadership is beautiful to behold.

As a result they are sending legislation to the Senate, and it is bulging with bills waiting to be passed.

Meanwhile, the Senate has been slowed down by a group teamed up with certain southern Democrats, who are consistently and cleverly undercutting almost every liberal piece of legislation to come before Congress.

Assignment: America

More Cowboys Needed

By INEZ ROBB

FORT WORTH, Texas — In view of all the cowboy crooning over the radio and all the kids who demand cowboy suits for Christmas, it's rather surprising to learn there is a distinct shortage of apprentices in the cowboy business.

The cow poke ain't home on the range any more, podner. In fact, he just ain't. Cow men have a hard time gittin' enough hands to tend the critters, cows, that is.

Watt Reynolds, cow man and one of the nine heirs of the vast Reynolds spread (345,000 acres) kindly drawled me this information as we sat comfortably over libations in the elegant Blackamoor room of the Fort Worth club.

"Sure is hard to get cowboys," Reynolds opined. "The dream of being a cowpoke fades by the time a kid is 18." He is afraid the cowboy may someday join the buffalo, and then, where will the cow business be?

The Reynolds family and the Reynolds ranches are famous in Texas. It's a pioneer clan that came to this state with nothing but ambition and a will to work and has wound up in the cattle and chips.

"But my uncle used to tell me that many a time he could have traded a pair of boots for a section of Texas land — if only he's had the boots," Reynolds said.

* * *

Revealing the Facts.

DESPITE all the cowboy novels and motion pictures produced annually showing the last gasp wars between cow and sheep men, almost all cow men now have flocks of sheep, too.

Nor are all cow men picturesque Texans in big hats, frontier pants and ten-gallon hats. Scotch, English and New York capital owns some of the largest ranches in Texas. The SMS ranch, for instance, is owned by New York capital and operated by Swedes.

This I learned from Frank Reeves, a newspaper stock market analyst with a difference. The stock Reeves analyses is cattle rather than coupons.

He does a daily column "The Chuck Wagon" for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, but there all resemblance to New York newspapers' stock experts end. Reeves wears western pants, a Stetson, boots encrusted with manure and a heavy sun and wind burn rather than the eastern analyst's double-breasted blue job and pale, hunted look.

Reeves' beat is from Denver, Colo., to Brownsville, Texas, and from Chicago to the King Ranch, or wherever there are western cattle to write about. He travels a minimum of 50,000 miles annually to cover his beat.

Reeves is a talented man. He can sit a rail fence and chew tobacco with the men or lead out the ladies to cut a pigeon wing in any square dance.

When I asked Reeves, a former cowboy, what a cattle editor does, he grinned and said:

"The best he kin."

Dave Boone Says:

A STANDOUT feature of the Atlantic Pact signing was the complete lack of color, fervor or gripping drama, more's the pity. Here was one of the great moments of history, yet not a speech was delivered in a way to stir men's hearts.

* * *

This was an occasion crying out for stirring utterance and vivid personalities. But even the President spoke from a script with no more fire than we have heard from Rotary club chairmen reporting on receipts from a clambake.

* * *

Oh, yes, there is merit, in simplicity, and oratory can go too far, but it doesn't seem to me that an event as important as the signing of the North Atlantic treaty should be on the dull side.

* * *

A little showmanship would have helped stir the world as it needs to be stirred. This was more than a routine ceremony marking the first pitch of the baseball season.

Farmer's Diary

Caring For Stray Dog

By CALVIN A. BYERS

OUR second boy, 14, has a strong love for animals. The creatures know it. He can do things to and for them that are sometimes amusing—or amazing.

He rode the young bull after he had removed a nail from the animal's foot; a squirrel ate from his hand; once he watched a herd of deer at close range, when they drank from the woodland rill; he sometimes goes off exploring alone, or sits fishing along Honey Creek watching wild ducks or crayfish.

When we saw him hurry to the barn with a remnant of meat from his dinner, we suspected that he had a new friend and confidant in the animal kingdom. Presently he came in, his fingers bloody, and washed his hands at the kitchen sink.

"Oh, it's a little she-dog with a bullet through its shoulder," he told his mother. "May I take out the menthiolate and disinfect the wound? I got the bullet out." Premission given, he turned at the door to add, "She came here yesterday. All she wants is a chance to get well. She shivered and was so afraid when I went into the barn that a fellow had to pity her! So I made her a bed between two bales of hay and fed her some milk when I did the milking last night. Today she feels better."

The half-grown mongrel-hound, white with brown spots, was around for a fortnight. Then our hospitality began to feel strained, for she got to eating eggs. Not that we blamed her, but our hens did not lay enough for our family and her!

She would lie in the sun on the sheltered side of the barn until an old hen cackled, then get up quietly and trot straight in, to see what she could find. She roamed over the slope for young rabbits, too, and often came up from the swamp looking pleased. I guess she found wild birds' eggs among the clumps of swampgrass. Too, she kept us awake at night, when she howled and barked at the moon.

"You'll have to call the dog catcher," his mother finally told him. "I just won't have that dog around here any longer."

"If we had a gun, you could shoot her," said one brother, grinning. But the one who had befriended the animal shook his head. "It's the time of year when it's good to stay alive. She can take care of herself, most anywhere."

He coaxed me to go with him for a little drive through the hills. At the far edge of a wooded clearing, along a lonely back road, he stopped the car and from the back seat produced the offending stray. She leaped out of his arms and went happily off into the grass, along a rabbit trail.

We paused long enough to admire the view through the vista of hills. Then we drove home. "She might mate with a fox, and have whelps even shrewder than she is," said my son, hopefully.

City's YWCA to Join In National Observance April 24

Philippine Girl to Talk At Services

Members Hear Convention Reports

"The YWCA, Your Window to the World" is the theme of national YWCA week which will be held April 24 through April 30.

Mansfield's observance will begin with vesper services at the YWCA Sunday afternoon, April 24.

Miss Filomeno Florendo, formerly of the YWCA sctaff in Manila, and now with the American Service Institute in Pittsburgh, will be the guest speaker at the Sunday services.

Announcement of "Y" week was made at a convention report meeting held at the YWCA Wednesday night for all association members.

The five delegates to the national convention in San Francisco, March 7 through 14, spoke at the meeting. They included Mrs. Lionel Smaltz, secretary of the board of trustees; Miss Betty Blackstone, YWCA president; Miss Agnes Kessler, executive secretary, and Miss Rhea Ohl and Miss Lucille Prosser, members of the Employed Girls' club.

Mrs. Smaltz told the group the Mansfield Ladies' Day Out program was the newest group to receive recognition at the convention as part of the young homemakers program. "YW Wives" was the new national name chosen at the convention for such groups.

NAME CHANGED

Miss Kessler discussed the new national constitution adopted at the San Francisco meeting. It officially changed the name from Young Women's Christian Associations by dropping the "s" to make association singular.

Miss Kessler said the "Y" here will be affected by membership rules set up by the national constitution. The new rules call for uniform local membership fees. The new constitution also says anyone over 17 may choose to become an electoral member of an association, thus becoming eligible to vote and hold office.

The convention also set up a three-year program for all associations to follow. Emphasis of the program is on building a world in which good will, justice, and freedom are the controlling forces.

Miss Ohl and Miss Prosser reported on the national business and professional assembly which they attended, and Miss Blackstone discussed the public affairs program.

After the reports, members discussed how national recommendations might affect the Mansfield association in the near future.

As part of the program, Miss Janet Kelly, Miss Ann Knapp, and Miss Earline Reynolds appeared in costume to sing of the struggles of YWCA members in 1869, 1899, and 1929.

Theft of a traveling bag and contents valued at $300 and merchandise valued at $50 from the Union station platform last night was reported to police by Ernest J. White, Pennsylvania railroad detective.

Meanwhile, Robert Dinger, Mansfield, R. D. 3, reported to police that two hubcaps and a fog light from his car were stolen while the car was parked at the rear of the Hartman Electric company on North Diamond street. Dinger valued the stolen items at $15.20.

Visit Hatchery at Lexington

Kiddies Learn Baby Chick Story

By ROBERT SCHWEITZ

Richland county residents consume 80,000 eggs a day, according to county extension office figures, but some of those that aren't eaten are used by the county's seven hatcheries for chick production.

Thirty-two Brinkerhoff school first graders visited one of these hatcheries in Lexington Wednesday afternoon see how the chicks are born.

The visit was part of the school's program to demonstrate to the children how the farm contributes to their daily life. They will visit dairy, truck and other farms in their study, led by their teacher Miss Barbara Smythe, first grade teacher, who lives at 479 Marion avenue.

The youngsters cuddled the chicks and squealed as F. C. Green, hatchery operator, pulled tray after tray of freshly-hatched chicks out of the incubator.

The eggs take about 21 days for incubation. They are kept at a temperature of 99 degrees and are turned automatically every three hours. The humidity in the incubator is kept constant at 87.

George McConnell, operator of the Mansfield-Shelby hatcheries, said the hatchery business in the county rivals dairy farming as an industry. He pointed out that the Shelby hatchery's capacity is 200,000 chicks per month. The Mansfield branch of the company hatches 66,000 eggs every three weeks.

Many of Richland county-born chicks are bought by consumers in the county but several of the firms ship them all over the country. Most of them go by parcel post.

The Brinkerhoff youngsters were the first to visit the Lexington hatchery this year. Woodland school will see the little chicks next week.

U. S. Seeks Way to Keep Silt Out of Area Lakes

Congressman J. Harry McGregor of the 17th district said yesterday in Washington that the soil conservation service in a proposed re-survey of the Muskingum watershed in Ohio will try to find ways to stop reservoirs in the area from filling up with eroded soil.

A resolution authorizing the re-survey was approved Tuesday by the House Public Works committee. No further congressional action is necessary on the resolution itself.

McGregor pointed out, however, that the re-survey can not get under way unless the soil conservation service can scrape up the $75,000 which it is authorized to spend. This may require an appropriation, he said.

The resolution was sponsored by Rep. Robert T. Secrest, D., of Ohio, and was backed by McGregor, a member of the Public Works committee, and other Ohio house members whose districts include parts of the watershed.

McGregor said an earlier survey, completed Feb. 9, 1943, was directed mainly to such things as stream pollution and conservation in general. It did not go fully into the question of soil erosion, he said.

Since then, he said, the 14 reservoirs on the several rivers in the watershed appear to be filling up with soil washed from the farms and hillsides.

Plans to Attend Health Meeting

Miss Clara Schumm of the Mansfield Health department will go to Canton Tuesday to attend the district meeting of the Ohio State Nurses association and the Stark County TB and Health association. The institute will be held in the Mercy hospital school of nursing.

The conference will start with registration at 9 a. m. and continue through a program of detailed discussion on TB control and hospital X-ray work and the part both nurses and doctors play in the program.

Among the speakers will be Dr. William B. Wild, former Mansfield health commissioner, who will talk on "Tuberculin Testing in the Schools."

Although there is some debate on the origin of meteorites, they are probably remains of masses circulating about the sun.

City's YWCA to Join In National Observance April 24

Philippine Girl to Talk At Services

Members Hear Convention Reports

"The YWCA, Your Window to the World" is the theme of national YWCA week which will be held April 24 through April 30.

Mansfield's observance will begin with vesper services at the YWCA Sunday afternoon, April 24.

Miss Filomeno Florendo, formerly of the YWCA sctaff in Manila, and now with the American Service Institute in Pittsburgh, will be the guest speaker at the Sunday services.

Announcement of "Y" week was made at a convention report meeting held at the YWCA Wednesday night for all association members

The five delegates to the national convention in San Francisco, March 7 through 14, spoke at the meeting They included Mrs. Lionel Smaltz, secretary of the board of trustees; Miss Betty Blackstone, YWCA president; Miss Agnes Kessler, executive secretary, and Miss Rhea Ohl and Miss Lucille Prosser, members of the Employed Girls' club.

Mrs. Smaltz told the group the Mansfield Ladies' Day Out program was the newest group to receive recognition at the convention as part of the young homemakers program. "YW Wives" was the new national name chosen at the convention for such groups

NAME CHANGED

Miss Kessler discussed the new national constitution adopted at the San Francisco meeting. It officially changed the name from Young Women's Christian Associations by dropping the "s" to make association singular.

Miss Kessler said the "Y" here will be affected by membership rules set up by the national constitution. The new rules call for uniform local membership fees The new constitution also says anyone over 17 may choose to become an electoral member of an association, thus becoming eligible to vote and hold office.

The convention also set up a three-year program for all associations to follow. Emphasis of the program is on building a world in which good will, justice, and freedom are the controlling forces.

Miss Ohl and Miss Prosser reported on the national business and professional assembly which they attended, and Miss Blackstone discussed the public affairs program.

After the reports, members discussed how national recommendations might affect the Mansfield association in the near future.

As part of the program, Miss Janet Kelly, Miss Ann Knapp, and Miss Earline Reynolds appeared in costume to sing of the struggles of YWCA members in 1869, 1899, and 1929.

Visit Hatchery at Lexington

Kiddies Learn Baby Chick Story

By ROBERT SCHWEITZ

Richland county residents consume 80,000 eggs a day, according to county extension office figures, but some of those that aren't eaten are used by the county's seven hatcheries for chick production

Thirty-two Brinkerhoff school first graders visited one of these hatcheries in Lexington Wednesday afternoon see how the chicks are born

The visit was part of the school's program to demonstrate to the children how the farm contributes to their daily life. They will visit dairy, truck and other farms in their study, led by their teacher Miss Barbara Smythe, first grade teacher, who lives at 479 Marion avenue.

The youngsters cuddled the chicks and squealed as F C Green, hatchery operator, pulled tray after tray of freshly-hatched chicks out of the incubator.

The eggs take about 21 days for incubation They are kept at a temperature of 99 degrees and are turned automatically every three hours. The humidity in the incubator is kept constant at 87.

MISS ELIZABETH COLE WED TO PAUL SCOTT THURSDAY

Formal Nuptial Vows Solemnized at 8 O'Clock At the Mayflower Congregational Church.

IN A LOVELY GOWN which she had designed and made, Miss Elizabeth Cole became the bride of Paul C. Scott, Thursday. The gown was made of ivory slipper satin with a fitted bodice extending below the waistline in the back. The tight fitting sleeves came to points over the hands. A row of tiny satin self covered buttons trimmed the very plain skirt front from the waist to the hemline.

A full length veil was held in place by a cap of antique lace made by the bride's mother.

The nuptial vows were exchanged in the Mayflower Congregational church last evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. A. F. Lindbeck officiated for the single ring ceremony before an altar decorated with palms and beauty baskets of white flowers. Seven branch candelabra lighted the the scene.

Miss Cole is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cole, 394 West Fifth street, and Mr. Scott is the son of Mrs. Nellie Scott, R. D. 3.

Mrs. Giles Hamilton presided at the organ for the prenuptial music, and Miss Ruth Lindbeck played several violin selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, carried a beautiful antique ivory fan with a removable corsage of sweetheart roses at the hub. The fan was outlined with greenery and white rosebuds.

Mrs. Alphonse Melino of Rochester, New York, who served with Miss Cole overseas in the Women's Army corp, was her only attendant. She wore a pale blue embroidered taffeta gown made with a fitted bodice and a georgette yoke. The yoke was trimmed with a band of taffeta. The long sleeves came to points over her hands and a very full skirt completed the gown, worn by Mrs. Melino at her own recent wedding. On her head was a half bonnet of matching net with a sequin roll band.

A fan shaped arrangement of pastel sweetpeas outlined with pink rosebuds and tied with a pink ribbon was carried by Mrs. Melino.

Mrs. Cole chose a royal blue crepe dress with black and pink accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Scott was attired in a powder blue wool crepe dress with black and white accessories. Pink rosebud corsages completed their ensembles.

James W. Scott, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Guests were escorted to their pews by John Robert Cole, brother of the bride, and Max E. Scott, brother of the bridegroom.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception for one hundred relatives and friends was held in the church parlors. The candlelit table was centered with a four tiered wedding cake and the bridal bouquets. Presiding at the table were Mrs. J. R. Cole, sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Donald Scott, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Herbert Palmer, friend of the couple.

For her honeymoon through Pennsylvania, Virginia and Washington, D. C., Mrs. Scott wore a powder blue suit with black accessories and her Sweetheart rosebud corsage.

Upon their return, April 17, the couple will be at home at R. D. 3.

Mrs. Scott graduated from Mansfield Senior high school During the war she served three years with the Women's Army corp, eight months of which was spent in Paris, France. She also served with the War Department as an overseas civilian for a year in Paris. She is employed as bookkeeper for Max Meisel, public accountant.

Mr. Scott attended Mansfield Senior high school and served three years with the 77th division, eighteen months of which was in the Pacific theater. He is an employe of the Westinghouse Electric corporation.

Are you one of those budget-conscious housewives who would like to find more recipes for "left-over" meals? There's an article in the April issue of House Beautiful magazine which contains no less than seven recipes which put to good use the remains of your roast. Incidentally, the magazine gives this advice: "Don't call them 'leftovers'. Gastronomically speaking, there's a lot in a name and 'left over' sounds untempting. Instead, call it 'ragout' or 'pilaffe' and back it up with thoughtful, dignified preparation."

Easter appointments were used for the 1 o'clock luncheon bridge held by twenty-four members of Colony club yesterday at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. Two guests, Mrs. W. G. McQuigg and Mrs. P. E. Knachel, were in attendance.

Bridge was the diversion of the afternoon. When the scores were tallied, prizes were awarded to Mrs. H. L. Cramer jr., first; Mrs. James Guest, second; Mrs. J. R. Ralston, third, and Mrs. Kent Hammer, fourth.

Mrs. Howard Clark was the chairman in charge of arrangements. Assisting her were Mrs. J. L. Artley, Mrs. J. H. Ellison, Mrs. Guest, Mrs. Floyd Kautz, Mrs. E. P. Monahan, Mrs. Robert Ross, Mrs. D. C. Wetmore, Mrs. J. P. White and Mrs. H. L. Wiler.

A tea and election of officers will be held at the next scheduled session, April 27. This meeting will be held in the undercroft of the Grace Episcopal church with Mrs. Clark as chairman.

Have You Tried To Spruce Up Bathroom?

By ELEANOR ROSS

WE certainly did enjoy viewing a showing of beautiful bathroom interiors rich with black glass, special heating devices, installed violet and red ray lamps and such.

We knew right well that we couldn't hope to have such a bathroom now, so what we did was to give the old bathroom a going over, make it neat and shiny and then resolve to keep it that way. We would have mirrors sparkling, shower curtains always looking like new, and tub and basin stain free and always spotlessly clean. Then with new towels, nice big fat fluffy ones, with bold monograms, with everything put and kept in its place, the bathroom would at least look sparkling bright if not luxurious.

First of all, it is a good idea to make use of synthetic detergents. A little sprinkled in the tub not only makes for a foamy bath but does a lot to eliminate that old enemy, the bathtub ring. As the powder should be kept close at hand, it is a good idea to invest in one of those decorative metal containers with a pouring spout, for both powder and flakes, picking a color or design that will harmonize with the color scheme of the room.

Bathtub Brush

Next, have handy a bathtub brush, say, one of those nice quick-drying glistening nylon ones. Swish a little cleaner around, use the brush, and in a few moments the tub is clean.

If it never is permitted to become really stained and dirty, keeping it clean means but a few moments of work. If there should be rust stains on porcelain enamel surfaces that won't yield to ordinary household cleaners, there are special products made for this purpose.

It is good to lay in a can of special cleaning agents of this type, so that when there is a stain, it can be removed quickly without a lot of hard work.

Keep bathroom mirrors sparkling bright by giving them a good polishing every week. A cake of regular household cleaner or a creamy glass cleaner will do the job in a jiffy. Just use a dampened, soft cloth, let dry and then polish. Or use a liquid glass cleaner, just spray it on and polish. No matter how luxurious a bathroom, a streaked or cloudy mirror will spoil the whole effect. And by the same token, bright mirror surfaces will give the simplest bathroom quite an air.

Whether fabric or platic, get after shower curtains and keep them fresh looking. Get after the family to carefully spread the curtain after use, so that it won't streak. Don't wait until it falls to bits, but invest in a new shower curtain when the old one doesn't yield much to freshening. There are such pretty plastic sets, and such handsome fabric ones available at such reasonable prices that they are in the nature of a bargain.

A chef's salad is a good choice for Sunday night supper. Make of salad greens—as many varieties as your refrigerator holds—plus celery, hard-cooked egg, thin strips of tongue, ham, or chicken, and thin strips of mild yellow cheese. Toss the salad with a well - seasoned French dressing and serve it with hard rolls and butter and Melba toast.

CLEVELAND LADY LOST 44 POUNDS
No trouble being fitted with New Look
Thanks to Rennel

"Thanks to Rennel I have lost 44 pounds," writes Mrs. M. L. Beardsley, 1632 E. 75th St. Suite 4, Cleveland, Ohio. "Before starting Rennel I weighed 189 lbs. and being only 5 ft. 1 inch tall I could hardly get around. Now I weigh 145 lbs. and at 49 years of age feel like a kid again—no trouble now being fitted with that New Look."

Imagine, eat plenty and lose weight with this simple yet effective amazing home recipe. After purchasing a bottle of Rennel from your druggist pour the contents into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill bottle. Take two tablespoonfuls twice a day. That's all there is to it. No diets to complicate your meal planning. No expensive vitamins to fortify your system from weakness while going without food for you can eat normally. If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple, easy way to lose pounds of bulky fat and help regain slender, more youthful curves—if reducible excess fat doesn't seem to disappear almost like magic just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. Don't be switched to another product, insist on and be sure to get the genuine Rennel. —Adv.

JOTTINGS IN PENCIL

It is always more risky than catty for one gossip columnist to deny another gossip columnist's items, for the simple reason that people who make news don't always tell the truth. In fact, they almost never do, if it is more convenient at the moment to tell a lie.

As a current example, I give you an excerpt from this column, dated December 13, 1948:

"Paulette Goddard and Burgess Meredith will ponder a big decision around the first of the year if he returns from France on schedule. Close friends are disregarding Paulette's denial of a possible divorce. Can you blame them when she's doing Mexico with John Steinbeck and Burgess is seeing Paris with Alma Churchill?"

Not a world-shaking bit of info, but accurate.

Following which I offer this item from a column originating in Hollywood:

"Paulette Goddard returns from Mexico City sending all those rumors of divorcing Burgess Meredith and marrying author John Steinbeck higher than a kite. 'Just like Christmas, rumors that Buzz and I will divorce start like clockwork this time of year,' Paulette said, "Etc. Etc.

As you no doubt read in the news pages the other day, Miss Goddard is divorcing Mr. Meredith. Said so herself, just as sweetly and blandly as if she'd never laughed a tinkling little laugh at the very idea.

For Saturday, April 9

A weekend layoff would not be amiss, or intemperate following the high tensions, crystallized activities, as concentrated efforts and endeavors of the preceding period, in fact complete inertia, rest, relaxation would add to the excellent promise of plans, performances and ambitions is kept in abeyance, for incubation, lest forced issues or over-zealous activity prove detrimental, even ruinous. Find social or romantic outlets for keyed-up energies and inspirations.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, are urged to let down overzealous tensions and stresses; in which a conflict of energies, plans and purpose may play havoc with impulses, emotions. Projects in which new, unique or experimental efforts may be brought to bear on difficult, critical or over-strenuous activities and ambitions are in the offing. So many angles, such aggressive ideas and recklessly pursued tactics call for regulation lest the dynamic energy be a defeating factor social, sentimental, family contacts may alleviate.

Pneumatic Rocket Mail

N. Y. Post Office Uses Guided Missiles

By JEROME DREYER
Central Press Correspondent

NEW YORK—When the talk gets around to guided missiles, the average citizen invisions destruction bent rockets flaming through the stratosphere. However, bring up the same subject with the man in gray who delivers your mail and you will hear another, more peaceful side of the story.

He, too, deals with guided missiles, but his variety never rise skyward. In fact, they rarely see the light of day — they're underground and literally "carry the mail" through miles of tubes.

The most comprehensive example of this little known activity of the Post Office department is set up in this city, where 27 miles of iron tube stretch up and down and across Manhattan and through which on an average day 5,000,000 letters and small packages woosh to their destinations.

Along this route are 22 points where the 180 mm. rockets pneumatically pause to discharge and receive letters. Each of these stops represent a sub-post office and each handles more mail than is handled in an entire city like St. Louis.

On an ordinary day as many as 8,000 of the rockets, each about two feet long, simultaneously chase each other below the pavements at a steady 35 miles an hour. Split-second timing is essential, which means five rockets must come and go every minute, allowing a second to spare to avoid collisions.

Its value as a means of communication was best depicted during the almost catastrophic blizzard in December, 1947, in which New York's above-ground wheeled traffic was completely halted. The tubes carried 11,000,000 items in a 24-hour period, almost half the city's business transactions.

THE FORERUNNER of the present-day system had its inception in 1880, on a hot summer day. While William S. Lamson, owner of a notions store in Lowell, Mass., was watching his perspiring clerks make endless trips to the cashier for change, his eyes came to rest on a box of croquet balls, which provided the idea. Sawing them in half and hollowing them out, he soon had them rolling down an inclined track from the sales counter to the cash box.

Word of this innovation soon got around and Lamson was asked to install the same system in other places of business. The requests became so numerous, he closed his notions store and opened a workshop.

A little over a decade later, the first pneumatic tube sufficiently large enough to carry mail was designed and then installed in Philadelphia, between the main post office and a substation a half mile away.

In 1897, the tube system was installed in New York. The original one, 3,750 feet long, connected City Hall and the Old Produce Exchange and sped its projectiles over the course in 56 seconds.

The dedication brought forth crowds and the official greeter of the era, Chauncey M. Depew. While the spectators cheered, Depew stuffed a Bible and a flag into a silver tube and sent it on its way. Seconds later the rocket was back, and when Depew opened the lid, a small but extremely dizzy kitten popped out its head.

"What more can I say?" chuckled the witty Depew. "The cat is out of the bag!"

The maintenance of this 27-mile network is carried on by a group of men unique in the service of Uncle Sam — the rocketeers.

Equally as unique is their method of locating leaks in the air powered rocket subway. Working as a four-man crew, one holds a stopwatch, two listen sharply and the fourth grunts into the iron tube. By timing the echo thrown back, the leak is located.

Little public attention comes to the way of these underground workers, but when it does it usually is dramatic. Like the incident that brought out a squad of police and nearly caused a raid on a bank.

It was just before dawn when a rookie cop, passing a bank, heard a hammering in a corner of the building. Positive he had trapped a safecracker, he turned in an alarm and soon the bank was surrounded.

★

JUST WHEN the police were ready to close in, someone noticed an open manhole. Closer inspection revealed the noise was emanating from there.

It developed that the mail tubes rose close to the surface at that point and then turned a sharp bend. It seems the rockets were hammering against the curve in the tube.

The network has over 1,000 of these bends, which is the reason a 35-mile-an-hour speed is maintained. If the course was straightaway, the air pressure easily could push the rockets along at better than 100 miles an hour. However, even at this 35 mile-per-hour speed, the rocketeers must be cautious.

Several times daily they send out a decoy rocket, punched full of holes and filled with lubricating oil. This projectile sprays the curves with a protective film to ease the battering.

Other organizations where speed in delivery is essential have found the air tube systems of infinite help. At the famed Mayo clinic, for example, they make operating room-to-laboratory transit of human tissue almost instantaneous, where previously precious time was wasted carrying the material by hand.

★

A TUMOR operations presents a good example of the need for speed in analysis. Often it is not possible for the surgeon to tell by simple examination whether a growth is malignant or non malignant — the difference between a simple tumor or cancer.

The laboratory may be several hundred feet away and split seconds are like hours when the surgeon halts midway in the operation to await the report. With the pneumatic tubes, the specimen arrives in seconds, protected in a sealed sterile container.

This air-powered 'railroad" also has found satisfied users whose buildings usually are sprawled far apart. One plane builder, linking seven buildings, sharply cut his delivery time of small parts and blue prints and at the same time saved over $150,000 a year in messenger service.

Other systems have been installed in Washington, D. C. In the Pentagon, the world's largest office building, the system served the building's 140 acres with 10,000 pounds of mail a month. Another system, connecting the State and Justice departments, keeps confidential messages safe from prying eyes and intercep tion.

Yes, old Bill Lamson's croquet balls have passed under many wickets since that day in 1880.

Sleeps Too Late, 17 Diamonds Gone

CLEVELAND — (INS) — David Ludell, 38, a Long Island, N. Y., jewelry salesman, reported to police yesterday the loss of 17 diamonds from a wallet he had left under a mattress of his Pullman berth on a train arriving from New York.

Ludell told police that he had overslept and in his haste to leave the train at Union terminal he forgot two wallets.

Price Drop Predicted

COLUMBUS (UP) — A drop in chicken prices may follow the big increase in chick purchases for broiler production in Ohio, Mahlon Sweet, poultry specialist at Ohio State university, said yesterday.

Sweet said there has been about a 50 per cent increase in chick hatchings in Ohio this spring, with much of the increase going to broiler producers.

No price support for broilers will be available this year, Sweet said, and as the season progresses, market prices for chickens are likely to show a steady decline.

Phone Operators Discover Ideal Answer to Gag, Ring For Revenge

NEW YORK SIDESHOW: George Wolf was working late (on an ad campaign) at the home of a colleague. He decided to call his wife at Rye. . . . Not wishing to charge the call to his host, he phoned collect. . . . When the operator asked his name, George quipped: "Montgomery Clift!" . . . The operator gasped—and George heard her alert other operators "about the celebrity" on her line. . . . Mrs. Wolf wouldn't accept the charges. "Never heard of him," she said. . . . Wolf then told the operator he was clowning and the call went through.

When he finished, the phone rang. . . . "George Wolf?" asked the voice. . . . "Yes". . . . "One mo-ment, pul-leeze." . . . Nothing happened. . . .

He waited there like a dope for ten minutes until he realized they were evening things with him. . . . He hung up. . . . The phone rang again and again and again for hours. . . . He couldn't do his work and quit. . . . Revenge can be sweet, indeed.

Sallies in Our Alley: While Morton Downey was spellbinding his opening crowd at the Wedgewood Room (in the Waldorf), a pair of lovers were in a secluded corner playing Adam & Eve . . . "Get those two over there, kissing and kissing," whispered a gal.

"Don't knock it," replied Phil Regan. "It's still the best game in town."

Red Smith was asked if turning out a daily column wasn't quite a chore . . . "Why, no," dead-panned Red. "You simply sit down at the typewriter, open your veins, and bleed."

Success Story: Thirty-five years ago Victor Moore, the star, was handed a tip on a long-shot . . . He pawned his wife's earrings for $300 and risked all of it on the steed's nose and it won! . . . The same tipster then advised Victor to invest the entire winnings in certain real estate in the Jackson Heights sector near Manhattan Island . . . Today that property is worth $250,000.

Memos of a Midnighter: At the premiere of "Portrait of Jennifer Jones" (which stars his betrothed) producer D. O. Selznick attended with some other beautifilly on his arm . . . The Chas. Barneses (Midge Fielding) are unwinding.

At the Copa: "Look who just walked in—The 12th Street Rag!" . . . At Bradley's: "What she has on her back put him on his." . . . At the Bagatelle: "She says she acts for a living. Last time I took her out she acted like she was starved."

At the Royal Roost: "She's a light drinker. Drinks until it gets light."

Journalist Views Mystery of Life, a Young Girl Grows Up

It is something to see a girl of 19 turn into a young lady in ten minutes.

Only one thing can cause that—a sudden realization on her part that there is more to life than she has known.

I had a small part in such a drama the other day. Frances and I helped a neighbor girl over one of those emotional hurdles by which people grow up.

It was something to remember. And for us the experience held a little bonus of gladness, merely because we were there in a strange experience of terror and beauty to the girl—and shared it with her.

I was waiting on the sidewalk in midtown when the cab rolled up with Frances and our neighbor. Neither reached for her purse to pay the hackie — what woman does when a man's handy to carry out his chief privilege?—so I forked over the cash. The cabby winked at the girl, and got a blank look back.

We walked together into the big building—two ladies and a watchdog. The girl put her hand in mine and gave me a small smile of confidence. She had led a sheltered life. If she suspected the ordeal ahead, she gave no sign.

As quickly as possible we moved by elevator to the fifth floor. We came into a long room full of strange furniture and men in strange cloaks.

A sudden cloud of doubt sailed across the girl's face. My heart sank a little, too, for I wasn't sure just what lay ahead either. The whole mission might have been abandoned right then except for Frances. Women always have the courage in an emergency.

"Don't be afraid," said Frances. "Come on. The way you two look you'd think somebody was going to be murdered."

Well, I felt murder was a possibility—if anything happened to that girl.

The next moment she was seated in a chair, and one of the strange men was coming at her with a sharp instrument. The girl looked tensely ahead of her—and saw her own tense face staring back from a mirror.

Nina, our godchild, at the ripe old age of 19 months was about to get her first department store haircut.

As the scissors snipped off a bright blonde lock her face wrinkled and she let out a cry—the immemorial feminine wail over loss.

Immediately a small boy, freshly clippered, ran over.

"She probably thinks it's a bug crawling up the back of her neck, and going to bite her," he said gravely.

Nina looked down at him. The tears stopped at once, and she gave him the smile with which Cleopatra imprisoned Marc Antony.

"Most of the crybabies here are boys—not girls," said the barber, "Mister Robert." For some reason the men who cut baby girls' hair only have one name, too, just like those who operate in the penthouse-priced salons.

"Aw, I've had my hair cut many a time," boasted the boy.

We blew up a balloon for Nina and that captivated her. The work went swiftly—snip, snip— and the blonde treasure gave the floor a golden glitter.

Nina wept only once more. That was when Mister Robert held her face tightly while he carefully snipped her bangs.

In one day Nina had won a boy's heart, had her first haircut and abandoned an old toy. She would never be so young again. And neither would her godfather.

Navy's Mauler Packs Death!

Dive Bomber Sets New Record

Ten times the wallop of dive bombers of 20 years ago is the proud boast of the new Martin AM-1 Mauler, one-man carrier-based attack plane, which recently set a world's record for single-engine craft.

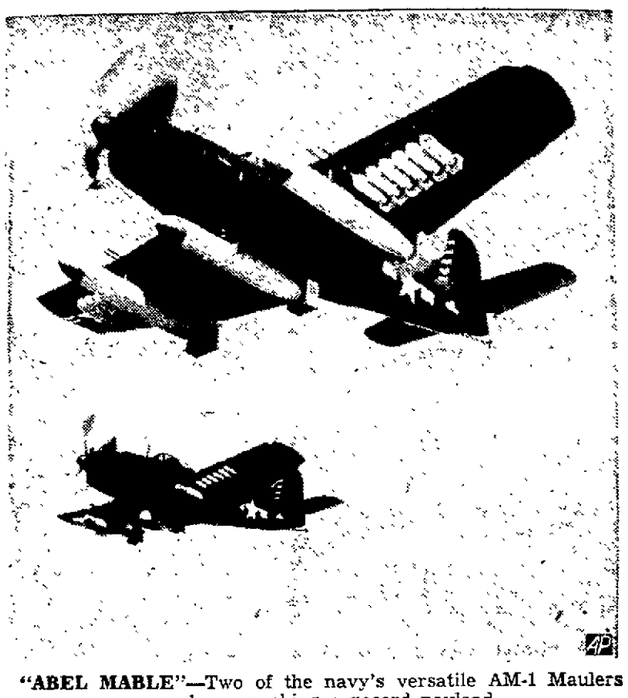
The Maulers can carry a destructive payload of 10,689 pounds, including three 2,200 pound torpedoes, twelve 250-pound bombs and four 20 mm. aerial cannon as was proved in the tests.

Eight hundred rounds of cannon ammunition are included in the "payload".

The first bomber shown in the accompanying picture carries all the above while the Mauler in the background carries a 2,000 pound bomb, two powerful "Tiny Tim" rockets and twelve five-inch rockets.

Known in the navy as "Abel Mabel", the Mauler can be used to drop mines or fly scouting missions as much as 2,000 miles.

More than 100 of these versatile planes have been delivered to the navy, according to the Glenn L. Martin company, producer of the craft.



"ABEL MABLE"—Two of the navy's versatile AM-1 Maulers are shown packing a record payload.

Scout Pool To Be Ready In Summer

Program Under Way At Camp Avery Hand

Mansfield Scouts will be able to take a dip in their own swimming pool by July 1, Floyd Dent, area Scout executive, promised today.

The pool, located at Johnny Appleseed area Camp Avery Hand, was "guaranteed to be open by July 1" by its designer, architect Herbert S. Jones.

Jones developed the plans for the area Scouts' pool free of charge.

The pool is 35 by 70 feet and has a diving board at the nine-foot or deep end with the shallow part being only three and a half feet deep.

Built by the Glasener company, the pool will cost slightly more than $20,000, including all equipment, supplies, and labor.

Funds for building the pool are part of the $60,000 raised by the Johnny Appleseed Area Scout council in 1944. Due to the war and scarcity of materials immediately following the war, little use of the money has been accomplished until now.

The funds were given by parents of Scouts and ex-Scouts, industrial organizations, and many other groups having no direct connection with Scouting.

PLAN MEMORIAL

The $60,000 will be used to build Camp Avery Hand into one of the best equipped Scout camps in the state as a permanent memorial to the Scouts who served in World War II, Dent said.

Along with the pool, an 80-by-35-foot memorial lodge will be built early this summer.

The lodge construction should begin by May 1 and a preliminary report by the contractor indicates the building will be ready for occupancy when the camp opens July 10, Dent said. Jones designed the lodge, too.

The lodge will have a mammoth open fireplace built of stone at each end of one large room. Estimates place the cost of the Scout building at $15,000 to $18,000.

Supplementing the large lodge will be a group of smaller buildings and partially open shelters to be built by individual troops.

Mansfield Explorer Post No. 2, led by Ray Osbun, has nearly completed a dining hall and three Adirondack shelters on the camp grounds.

An Adirondack shelter has three solid walls with an open side facing away from the prevailing winds. The open side can be closed in cold weather with a removable door.

Mansfield Troops No. 3 and 12 are planning similar small cabins at Camp Avery Hand. All of these cabins are being built of scrap lumber and lumber from dismantled buildings.

Coordinator for the building program at the camp is the Johnny Appleseed area building committee, headed by Roger Godfrey of Galion.

NEW HOPE THROUGH SCIENCE—

The story of the "ugly thief", John Wilbert Glaefke, former Mansfield reformatory "honor camp" inmate, who has been given a new lease on life by plastic surgery, appears in the April 11 issue of Time magazine. Glaefke, who was received at the OSR on Feb. 2, 1940 from Cuyahoga county (Cleveland) to serve a one to 15-year sentence for burglary and larceny, had been shunned by society and mocked and nicknamed by associates because of his looks. A thick, bridgeless nose, heavy lips and crooked teeth kept him from having dates and finally prompted his quitting school. After his parole from the OSR (he escaped once from Grafton honor camp) he was drafted into the army where he met the same barriers to success he had known before. Last year, he was arrested for stealing and appeared before Cleveland Judge Frank Merrick to whom Glaefke related his life story. Glaefke was turned over to a plastic surgeon who has performed four operations including extraction of the crooked teeth, thinning the lips and building a new bridge for Glaefke's nose. Today, with more operations still facing him, Glaefke is holding down a respectable job in Cleveland and no longer has to hide his face.

Sees Danger In Measure

By DON MILLER

Fight the proposed conservation unification plan "to the bitter end," Louis Bromfield, chairman of the State Conservation commission, warned sportsmen last night.

"The bill as it now stands is no good," he added.

The author-farmer then added, "I'm not speaking from a personal angle. I'd gladly relinquish my seat on the commission any time. I'm heartily in favor of a unification program and always have been. But not as it now stands."

The portion of the proposed measure to which Bromfield objected was the same as that which caused Frank Atwood, president of the League of Ohio Sportsmen, to threaten to carry the fight to the people of Ohio and demand a referendum.

This was the Metzenbaum amendment which would permit the governor to appoint the conservation commissioner for a six-year term and would limit powers of the commission itself. Under this amendment, the commission would act only in an advisory capacity to the commissioner and would have no such powers as at present.

COULD BE MODEL

When asked how he considered Ohio's conservation efforts as compared with those of other states, Bromfield declared:

"Ohio could well serve as a model for a good many other states in conservation work. I have seen several conservation departments around the country and this one is doing a good job."

The commission chairman declared the ideal solution to the unification program would be for sportsmen to push through the best possible measure, then amend it as time and opportunity afforded.

"Coordination is the main thing," he said. "With the position of commissioner thrown open as a political job, it would be hard to find a man who would cooperate with the commission. Only through coordination can the commission do its work."

Bromfield added that he feared public hunting would soon be a thing of the past in the entire U. S. He pointed to the changes the past few years have brought in the number of posted farms and expressed the certainty this trend would continue.

Huron Lets Contract for Voting Machines

55 Ordered; Delivery Set In 30 Days

Decision Follows Lengthy Study

NORWALK — Huron county voters, at next November's elections, will have the use of automatic voting machines, it was announced by Roy Gathergood, chairman of the county commissioners.

The announcement followed passage of a resolution awarding the bid for 55 machines to the Automatic Voting Machine corporation of Jamestown, N. Y., at a total cost of $71,500 plus amortization charges.

The machines, according to the manufacturer who was the lowest bidder, will be delivered within 30 days after the execution of the purchase contract. The price of the machines is $1,300 each.

Bids were opened at the 10 a. m. Tuesday deadline. Purchase contracts now are being drawn and call for 15 annual payments with three per cent interest assessed against the unpaid balances.

The machines to be purchased by the county will provide spaces for nine party candidates and will be equipped with mechanism for primary voting. Voters will be able to vote for a straight party ticket or for the individual candidates.

The machine, manually operated, is known as the nine party-50 candidate type.

A representative of the company will work with the board of elections during the first two elections and will assist in conducting an educational program.

The purchase of the machines follows nearly a year's study on the part of the commissioners, the board of elections and the general public.

When detectives searched the car they found the silverware hidden under a blanket in the trunk. A wrist watch valued at $96 and a wedding ring valued at $65 are still missing.

'Y' Handicraft Committee Maps Program For Year

The first annual meeting of the YMCA Handicraft committee was held last night to decide policies and activities for the coming year, Ralph B. Chapman, "Y" associate secretary, reported today.

The handicraft shop has been operating in the basement of the YMCA building for six weeks and already 185 boys have attended.

The committee decided that woodcraft, airplane model building, and leathercraft would be the principal activities for the coming year.

Model train and metal craft work will be done if enough interest is shown, Chapman said.

The committee also agreed that it would go all-out for father and son participation this year. Dads may come down any evening with their sons to work and a shelf of books and resource materials will be on hand for project planning. Men who wish to begin their own home shops will be given outlines and tool lists for the operation.

The aim of the program will be to get fathers to take more interest in their sons, Chapman said.

Members of the committee are E. Paul Stephens, E. C. Peat, L. C. Norton, Lee Weber, Harry Sowash and George Gaalaas.

Hint New Reich State In Offing

Three-Power Heads End Conference

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The United States, Britain and France ended their momentous conference on the future of Western Germany today, evidently in full agreement.

The final session among Secretary of State Acheson, British Foreign Minister Bevin and French Foreign Minister Schuman lasted less than an hour. A formal three - power announcement of agreements reached was expected momentarily.

Present at today's session also was Secretary of the Army Royall.

He has direct responsibility for operation of the American occupation in Germany although Acheson has control over policy.

Royall has been a strong advocate of switching over from military to civilian control in Germany and there has been some speculation —unconfirmed—that the United States, Britain and France would consider whether they should all change over at the same time.

Schuman was asked, as he went into Acheson's office, whether he expected to sign an agreement on Germany today, and he said that he did expect to "because this is the last meeting."

Lined throughout with glass, this tank is being cleaned and sterilized by Louis Grilli so he can age more beer. It's only one of the new tanks recently installed.

Grilli says good aging means clean tanks

335,328 bottles of beer were poured into this tank after Louis Grilli cleaned and sterilized it. An equal amount stands and ages to Burkhardt's distinctive flavor in the mate to this giant, and in the same new aging cellars are nearly a dozen other new tanks for the same purpose.

Ask any good cook and she'll tell you that there are certain processes in preparing good food that just can't be hurried. It's the same with good beer.

Then ask the cook her rules of cleanliness, and you'll learn that it's tops in importance.

Ask Grilli, who is one of the men responsible for the slow leisurely aging of tens of thousands of barrels of Burkhardt's Beer and Mug Ale—and you'll learn details that would surprise even the cautious cook.

Grilli would thank the man who first put glass linings into such huge tanks, for they are much easier to keep spick and span He would explain why the temperature always stays at 33 degrees around these tanks, and how low-temperature aging adds zest to flavor.

Throughout the long, time-consuming aging process, of course, Grilli draws off samples and checks his brew from day to day. He operates just like a careful cook in her kitchen.

Grilli will celebrate his sixth anniversary with us on Armistice Day. He was born in Italy and came to America when he was sixteen. His wife came from there, too, but she was a child when she landed.

However, she learned to cook all the fine, flavorful Italian dishes under the eye of experts. Just ask Grilli his favorite dish and he'll tell you, "Spaghetti with meat balls . . . or with chicken," and he'll go on to explain how careful his wife is to make it just right.

All the details of flavoring—salt, tomato, spices, and so on—are of great importance to him because he wants the finest flavored spaghetti that it's possible to cook.

Just like the details of combining good ingredients to make Burkhardt's Beer. We're proud of the quality of these ingredients of course.

But we're even more proud of the care and skill that men like Grilli use in putting these fine ingredients together.

We know that the wholehearted interest of our men is an extra that helps make Burkhardt's the beer so many people like best.

Princess Out to Meet The World

Margaret Hailed As Average Girl

LONDON — (AP) — The world and Princess Margaret are getting acquainted. Both seem down-right impressed.

Younger daughter of King George VI is 19 this year. She has had tutoring that equals schooling through four years of college. Now she's out to see for herself what makes things tick.

Already she has listened to debates in both houses of Parliament, attended sessions of juvenile and criminal court, visited several children's homes, toured shipyards and factories and watched the publication of a London daily newspaper.

There are more such tours to come.

Wherever the pretty young princess appears, crowds of loyal Britishers gather and cheer her. She smiles back, and laughs at the traffic policemen trying to unravel the snarls her appearance inevitably creates.

Buckingham Palace says only "the princess is getting experience at first hand of various aspects of the national life to fit herself for an adult role as a member of the royal family."

To vivacious Margaret all this is fun. It is relief from the relatively cloistered life of a royal darling. It is in line with a childhood remark that endeared her forever to Britishers:

"I wish we could be visiting these places when royalty aren't.

The young princess became of age last August 21, on her 18th birthday. That meant that if her father and older sister and now her nephew Prince Charles die, she could rule England without the appointment of a regent.

Her first official duty was to represent King George — whom she calls "Dad" — at the coronation of Holland's Queen Juliana.

Palace informants hint there will be more such royal functions, in which the king will be represented by a blue-eyed, pretty young girl with an impish smile and a keen interest in life.

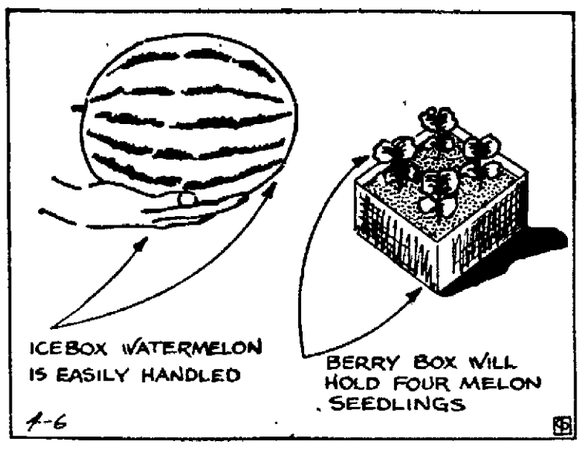
Icebox Melons Offer Variety



By DEAN HALLIDAY
(By Central Press)

Watermelons have gone modern, yet kept all their juicy, appetizing appeal. New varieties have been tailored down in size to fit the family refrigerator, as well as for convenience in handling.

An individual melon of excellent quality, the Icebox or Sugar Lump melon, is illustrated in the accommodating Garden-Graph. It is only slightly larger than a good-sized Honey Dew.

There are two strains of this melon, one white flesh, and the other red flesh. The plants are prolific and produce a great many fruits.

Another that fits conveniently in the refrigerator is called White Mountain. It is an early variety and the fruits are only 7 to 8 inches long. The flesh is rich with practically no rind.

Still another outstanding early variety is named Yankee Queen. It was developed at the University of New Hampshire for northern gardens, where summer growing weather often is too short for success with standard watermelons.

Because melon plants are "touchy" about being transplanted, the seed should be started indoors on inverted sods placed in berry boxes, as illustrated. A sod-filled box will hold four plants. When transplanting time comes, the sod can be carefully cut into four squares, each square containing one plant.

The sod method permits transplanting each plant in its own square of soil, without giving the plants too much of a setback, the result of disturbing their roots by lifting the plants from the soil.

Since watermelon plants sprawl almost as much as the vines of pumpkins or squashes, plenty of room must be allocated in the home garden for them.

Akron Football Coach Runs Into Manpower Trouble

AKRON — (INS) — Bud Houghton, Akron university football coach, today faced the severest manpower shortage at the Rubber City school in more than 10 years.

With only 30 men out for spring drills, Houghton has fewer grid candidates than any year since 1938, when Jim Aiken worked the entire season with only 25 candidates.

The squad dwindled toward the 30-mark as 15 players dropped out since the start of practice three weeks ago.

Because of injuries and scheduling difficulties, Houghton at times finds difficulty fielding two teams for a scrimmage session.

ABC Tourney On Last Legs

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. —(UP)—Competition in the team event will be concluded tonight in the 46th annual American Bowling Congress tournament.

The Jimie Smith five of South Bend, Ind., still headed the pack with a 3,027 series carded March 14. Although the Hoosiers appeared in little danger of losing the championship, veteran observers were quick to point out that the tournament boasts its share of 11th hour upsets.

In 1921, the Saunders team of Toronto sneaked in with a title score in the final hours, and in 1932 the Jefferson Clothiers of Dayton, O., duplicated the trick.

Tom Tucker Suffers Cut Of Leg Skin

Mansfield Senior high track team is an uncertain quantity today as the Tygers prepare for their date tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. with the strong Canton McKinley Bulldogs at Stadium field.

Little Tommy Tucker, possibly the state's fastest dashman, has split shin skin (read this fast) and may not be able to run. Tucker cut his shin (three-inch gash) on a wire at Stadium field and must see the school doctor at 9 a. m. tomorrow to get the final verdict.

Loss of Tucker may handicap the Tygers seriously in their quest of a third top-heavy victory. Tucker has won everything he has been in this season and paces the Bengal scorers with 32½ points. He has six firsts and has anchored two winning relay teams.

Last year, Tucker was the leading scorer as Mansfield surprised the Bulldogs, 75 to 43. Tucker placed in four events to run up 12¼ points.

The Tygers opened the season with a 92-to26 victory over Columbus East and then smashed Akron Garfield, 101 4-15 to 16 11-15 Tuesday.

PAUL OKAY NOW

Coach Harry Mehock did get some good news today, however. Veteran Paul Ferguson, who missed Tuesday's meet with a spike wound, will be ready to go tomorrow. He will compete in the pole vault and high jump.

Tomorrow's meet will be the first of the season for McKinley. The Bulldogs have been hampered by bad practice weather. Canton is scheduled to hold time trials today to pick the squad which will meet the Tygers.

John Kristoff is the only Canton veteran who won a first place last year. He copped the discus throw. John Colceri, Ohio's outstanding high school football player of 1948, will compete for the Bulldogs.

If Tucker can't run, either Veteran Johnny Bricker or Soph George Shoulders will go in the sprints. Then in the 880-yard relay, Hurdler A. C. Jenkins or Willie Fowler will take over.

Fowler and Ferguson tied for first in the high jump last year against Canton. Other returning victors for the Tygers are: Alan Poorman, mile; Paul Hammond, 880 and Don Cline, pole vault.

Madison's off-a g a i n-on-again baseball season was set to take another try this afternoon in a game at Lucas at 3 p. m. Gene Yohn was to draw his first pitching assignment as Coach Blaine Dowler attempts to find a second dependable starting pitcher for tournament play.

So far the Rams have been unable to play a single game on schedule. They were to meet Lucas yesterday but the contest was postponed by wet grounds.

Buck Baseball Team Favored

CHICAGO — (AP) — Ohio State's baseball nine is favored to win the Western Conference championship this season.

The Buckeyes will have eight veterans on their team, including pitcher Pete Perini and outfielder Ray Febhardt. Perini was the conference's top pitcher last year and Gebhardt led the league in the battling column.

Illinois and Michigan shared the baseball crown last yaer with 10 wins and two defeats each. However, both had to rebuild their teams this spring.

The western Conference league opens Saturday with Northwestern at Illinois. The Buckeyes start league play April 22-23 in Columbus against Wisconsin.

Bowling Banquet

The Victory bowling league banquet has been scheduled for April 20 at 6:30 p. m. at the sons of Herman hall, Secretary Mick Roberts announced today.

ACCEPTS HONORS—Alex Groza, captain of the Kentucky basketball team, accepts a copy of the mural which will be put in the new field house when completed. The presentation was made at a ceremony after the Wildcats won the NCAA title.

Soap Box Derby Designers Should Follow Rule Book

Each year a few new rules are added to the official Soap Box Derby rule book, and others are changed, so it is important for boys who are entering the eighth annual News-Journal Derby competition to study the rule book carefully.

The book, circulated through Brandenburg Chevrolet, contains the official rules and illustrations which help Derby contestants to interpret the rules and to follow the text. Every applicant receives a rule book when he signs up to enter the Derby.

Most of the changes are to make it easier for all boys to compete in the race on an equal basis. The changes of the past two years have stressed this point particularly, and also are aimed at making the race even safer than it has been in the past.

Changes for the 1948 race eliminated transparent windshields. Some boys had been taking advantage of this feature, and making their cars look like "submarines on wheels" by using transparent material all along the entire cowling. Hand brakes were eliminated because it had been discovered that foot-operated brakes were the only safe type.

This year the use of power tools in Derby racing car construction and finishing has been eliminated.

This rule will tend to give all boys an equal chance in the race. It means that boys who do not have access to power tools will be on the same basis as those who used to have the advantage of power tools.

There is one basic rule which boys must never forget: every car must be built only by the boy who enters the race. This means no help from parents, friends or any adult. You can have advice from your father, or from a previous Derby contestant, but you have to build the car yourself.

Some other rule changes which designers should study in the rule book are:

The weight allowance has been changed, with the only restriction being 250 pounds on the car and boy together. The 150-pound limit on the car itself has been dropped. So, if you are a light boy and want the car to be heavy, build that added weight right into the car. Don't try to add it afterward as extra weight, because that is against the rules.

The steering wheel may extend above the 28-inch height of the car. Another rule provides that the steering wheel must be no less than eight inches in diameter, and that there must be a two-inch clearance between the rim of the wheel and any part of the car or driver's body.

COST THE SAME

The cost limit remains the same, at $6 plus the cost of wheels and commercially-made steering devices.

A registration booth for Mansfield youngsters has been set up at Brandenburg's. Youngsters 11 to 15 years of age can sign for the N-J competition if accompanied by their parents.

Dearman's Go Into 'B' Loop Bowling Lead

Dearman's Transportation blasted the Commercial B league race wide open last night as it broke a first place tie by sweeping three games from Yuncker's Sports.

Dearman's racked up games of 909,948, and 974 to take a three game lead with only three weeks to go in the race. All five membefs of the team helped in the assault as they were over the 500 mark. Darrell McCullogh led the way with 607, and was followed by Alex Zacharzuk, 585, Horace Freese, 583, Harold Biles, 555, and Ed Campell, 501.

Best individaul score of the night was a consistent 214-213-213—640 by Jim Dunn of Ringside. E. Leroy counted 189-233-190—612 for Fancee Brands, Al Stirtzinger had 608 for Rose Bowl, and Ed Henrich 601 for Schroer's. Ed had the best single game, a 235.

Just under the 600 mark were: Roy Vaughn, Zitzer's, and Abe Keefer, Ingram-Martin, 598; Cliff Forsythe, Ringside 595; Bud Traxler, Ringside 589; Leo Yuncker, Zitzer's, 585, and Frank Burton, Mansfield Rug, 583.

Mansfield Rug swept three from Lions club and Ringside won a sweep from Ingram-Martin.

Grapple Purse Decision Due

Mansfield boxing and wrestling Commissioner Harold Bloodgood was to meet with wrestling Promoter Clete Kauffman today to decide what was to be done with the held-up purse of Whitey Whitler.

Bloodgood ordered the purse withheld last Saturday after Whitler pulled Stacy Hall's hip out of joint in their feature bout. Hall, a Columbus city detective, is now able to get around, although his leg is still taped tightly.

Plan Indoor Range

MILLERSBURG—Fred Myers, secretary-treasurer of the Holmes Rifle and Pistol club says that there will be an important meeting of the club tonight at 8 in the American Legion home. Plans will be discussed concerning an indoor rifle and pistol range.

Mehock Named Head Of Athletic Group

Harry Mehock, director of athletics in Mansfield public schools, last night was named to head the newly-formed Mansfield Athletic commission.

Serving with Mehock as officers of the commission will be Marshall Smith, vice-president, and Stan Kamen, secretary-treasurer. The three officers were elected at the second meeting of the organization at the city building.

The Athletic commission will set up policies and regulations for Mansfield amateur athletics Forty-five Mansfield sportsmen comprise the commission.

Two additional committees—baseball and golf—were appointed by Mehock. The softball and tennis groups had been formed previously.

Named to the baseball committee were: Gene Hartnett, Jimmy Lymper, Dewey Durant, Fred Rizzo, Ray "Lefty" Deeds, Bob Stevenson, Augie Morningstar, Ed Henrich and Aid Geiger. The golf group includes Irish McGee, Fred Huntsman, Charlie Stine, Ennis Walker and Bill Daugherty.

Committees will be selected to handle other sports in season.

The baseball committee hopes to revive adult amateur baseball in Mansfield this year. Tentative plans call for a county league, although a Mansfield Industrial league may be organized if interest warrants, according to Hartnett.

Three outfits have already expressed interest in a county league. They are: Mansfield Hawks, T. & E. Tavern and Disabled American Veterans.

PLAN BALL CLINICS

The commission will cooperate with the Mansfield chapter of the Hot Stove league to set up a series of clinics to teach many of the finer points of baseball to youngsters who will participate in the summer junior baseball program. Former Mansfield professional and semi-pro ball players will act as instructors at the clinic.

The next meeting of the softball committee had been scheduled for Tuesday night at 7:30 at the recreation department. Twenty-eight teams have signed for league play this year.

Indians Need Pitcher With Relief Ideas

SHREVEPORT, LA. — (AP) — The Cleveland Indians' pitching staff, touted as perhaps the strongest in the major leagues, has cropped out with a weakness — a need for a good relief pitcher.

With Bob Feller, Bob Lemon, Gene Bearden and Steve Gromek, the World Champions are well fixed for starting hurlers. But winning ball clubs almost invariably are able to put in a quick call to the bullpen and get a fireman who can save the game.

As the pre-season training goes into its last 10 days, the tribe's pitching roster is down from 14 to nine. And there isn't a hurler among them even closely resembling a Hugh Casey or Joe Page.

Old Satchel Paige, who seem to be albe to pitch every day, ought ot make an ideal relief pitcher. But Satchmo needs too long to warm up, and he just can't be hurried.

Wednesday Paige was rushed to Early Wynn's rescue in the Indians' game with the New York Giants at Houston. He'd been warming up for a period variously estimated at from 11 to 15 minutes. But he still wasn't loose, and the Giants cuffed him for four runs in his first inning. After that he settled down and permitted only one scratch single in the next three frames.

Manager Lou Boudreau has been hoping Sam oldak would become no. 1 relief man, but Sam's showing in the past month has been described by Boudreau as one of the spring's big disappointments.

Young Mike Garcia, who had a 19-16 record with Oklahoma City last year, may be developed into a relief hurler; but in the tight spots freshmen hurlers seldom have the savvy a good fireman has to have.

Middlecoff Is Far Off Links Pace

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(AP)—The Masters tournament sailed into the second round today in the wake of Lloyd Mangrum and the ebb tide golf of the one-time favorite, Dr. Cary Middlecoff.

Mangrum, whose golf money winnings this year are ahead of everyone's, took three strokes off par at the Augusta National with a 35-34—69.

Before Masters play began on the 6,900-yard course, Dr. Middlecoff was top choice and Mangrum second. But Mangrum, a twice wounded veteran from Niles, Ill., now is the choice to go on to victory.

Middlecoff, who resigned from Memphis dentistry for golf, was far from his game in the third round which required 76 strokes. That lofty score put him in a tie for 29th place.

Just behind Mangrum was Toledo's spark plug fortune heir, Frank Stranahan, with 35-35—70.

One of the old names of American golf was bracketed with three others in a tie for third place. Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., a star of the early '30s, spotted par a stroke with a 71.

Big Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., Dick Metz of Virginia Beach, and Kansas City's Leland Gibson, also had 71's.

WIND BOTHERS LITTLE

Lawson Little of Monterey, Calif., one of the best of windy weather golfers, had a 72 going into the second round.

Little's par equaller was shot into winds prevailing at 22 miles an hour and blowing 35 in gusts.

Defending Champion Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., had disappointing 73's.

Bobby Locke, the South African, and veteran professional Henry Picard of Cleveland had 75's. Byron Nelson of Roanoke, Tex., Gene Sarazen of Germantown, N. Y., and Horton Smith of Detroit had 75's. Nelson, Smith and Sarazen are former Masters winners.

Secret Session

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Baseball commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler arranged a meeting in secret session here today with club owners of the national league, presumably to discuss problems arising out of the game's reserve clause.

Sprint Star May Not Run Against Canton

Tom Tucker Suffers Cut Of Leg Skin

Mansfield Senior high track team is an uncertain quantity today as the Tygers prepare for their date tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. with the strong Canton McKinley Bulldogs at Stadium field.

Little Tommy Tucker, possibly the state's fastest dashman, has split shin skin (read this fast) and may not be able to run. Tucker cut his shin (three-inch gash) on a wire at Stadium field and must see the school doctor at 9 a. m. tomorrow to get the final verdict.

Loss of Tucker may handicap the Tygers seriously in their quest of a third top-heavy victory. Tucker has won everything he has been in this season and paces the Bengal scorers with 32½ points. He has six firsts and has anchored two winning relay teams.

Last year, Tucker was the leading scorer as Mansfield surprised the Bulldogs, 75 to 43. Tucker placed in four events to run up 12¼ points.

The Tygers opened the season with a 92-to26 victory over Columbus East and then smashed Akron Garfield, 101 4-15 to 16 11-15 Tuesday.

PAUL OKAY NOW

Coach Harry Mehock did get some good news today, however. Veteran Paul Ferguson, who missed Tuesday's meet with a spike wound, will be ready to go tomorrow. He will compete in the pole vault and high jump.

Tomorrow's meet will be the first of the season for McKinley. The Bulldogs have been hampered by bad practice weather. Canton is scheduled to hold time trials today to pick the squad which will meet the Tygers.

John Kristoff is the only Canton veteran who won a first place last year. He copped the discus throw. John Colceri, Ohio's outstanding high school football player of 1948, will compete for the Bulldogs.

If Tucker can't run, either Veteran Johnny Bricker or Soph George Shoulders will go in the sprints. Then in the 880-yard relay, Hurdler A. C. Jenkins or Willie Fowler will take over.

Fowler and Ferguson tied for first in the high jump last year against Canton. Other returning victors for the Tygers are: Alan Poorman, mile; Paul Hammond, 880 and Don Cline, pole vault.

With only 30 men out for spring drills, Houghton has fewer grid candidates than any year since 1938, when Jim Aiken worked the entire season with only 25 candidates.

The squad dwindled toward the 30-mark as 15 players dropped out since the start of practice three weeks ago.

Because of injuries and scheduling difficulties, Houghton at times finds difficulty fielding two teams for a scrimmage session.

Grapple Purse Decision Due

Mansfield boxing and wrestling Commissioner Harold Bloodgood was to meet with wrestling Promoter Clete Kauffman today to decide what was to be done with the held-up purse of Whitey Whitler.

Bloodgood ordered the purse withheld last Saturday after Whitler pulled Stacy Hall's hip out of joint in their feature bout. Hall, a Columbus city detective, is now able to get around, although his leg is still taped tightly.

Mehock Named Head Of Athletic Group

Harry Mehock, director of athletics in Mansfield public schools, last night was named to head the newly-formed Mansfield Athletic commission.

Serving with Mehock as officers of the commission will be Marshall Smith, vice-president, and Stan Kamen, secretary-treasurer. The three officers were elected at the second meeting of the organization at the city building.

The Athletic commission will set up policies and regulations for Mansfield amateur athletics Forty-five Mansfield sportsmen comprise the commission.

Two additional committees—baseball and golf—were appointed by Mehock. The softball and tennis groups had been formed previously.

Named to the baseball committee were: Gene Hartnett, Jimmy Lymper, Dewey Durant, Fred Rizzo, Ray "Lefty" Deeds, Bob Stevenson, Augie Morningstar, Ed Henrich and Aid Geiger. The golf group includes Irish McGee, Fred Huntsman, Charlie Stine, Ennis Walker and Bill Daugherty.

Committees will be selected to handle other sports in season.

The baseball committee hopes to revive adult amateur baseball in Mansfield this year. Tentative plans call for a county league, although a Mansfield Industrial league may be organized if interest warrants, according to Hartnett.

Three outfits have already expressed interest in a county league. They are: Mansfield Hawks, T. & E. Tavern and Disabled American Veterans.

PLAN BALL CLINICS

The commission will cooperate with the Mansfield chapter of the Hot Stove league to set up a series of clinics to teach many of the finer points of baseball to youngsters who will participate in the summer junior baseball program. Former Mansfield professional and semi-pro ball players will act as instructors at the clinic.

The next meeting of the softball committee had been scheduled for Tuesday night at 7:30 at the recreation department. Twenty-eight teams have signed for league play this year.

Plan Indoor Range

MILLERSBURG—Fred Myers, secretary-treasurer of the Holmes Rifle and Pistol club says that there will be an important meeting of the club tonight at 8 in the American Legion home. Plans will be discussed concerning an indoor rifle and pistol range.

Indians Need Pitcher With Relief Ideas

SHREVEPORT, LA. — (AP) — The Cleveland Indians' pitching staff, touted as perhaps the strongest in the major leagues, has cropped out with a weakness — a need for a good relief pitcher.

With Bob Feller, Bob Lemon, Gene Bearden and Steve Gromek, the World Champions are well fixed for starting hurlers. But winning ball clubs almost invariably are able to put in a quick call to the bullpen and get a fireman who can save the game.

As the pre-season training goes into its last 10 days, the tribe's pitching roster is down from 14 to nine. And there isn't a hurler among them even closely resembling a Hugh Casey or Joe Page.

Old Satchel Paige, who seem to be albe to pitch every day, ought ot make an ideal relief pitcher. But Satchmo needs too long to warm up, and he just can't be hurried.

Wednesday Paige was rushed to Early Wynn's rescue in the Indians' game with the New York Giants at Houston. He'd been warming up for a period variously estimated at from 11 to 15 minutes. But he still wasn't loose, and the Giants cuffed him for four runs in his first inning. After that he settled down and permitted only one scratch single in the next three frames.

Manager Lou Boudreau has been hoping Sam oldak would become no. 1 relief man, but Sam's showing in the past month has been described by Boudreau as one of the spring's big disappointments.

Young Mike Garcia, who had a 19-16 record with Oklahoma City last year, may be developed into a relief hurler; but in the tight spots freshmen hurlers seldom have the savvy a good fireman has to have.

Middlecoff Is Far Off Links Pace

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (AP) — The Masters tournament sailed into the second round today in the wake of Lloyd Mangrum and the ebb tide golf of the one-time favorite, Dr. Cary Middlecoff.

Mangrum, whose golf money winnings this year are ahead of everyone's, took three strokes off par at the Augusta National with a 35-34—69.

Before Masters play began on the 6,900-yard course, Dr. Middlecoff was top choice and Mangrum second. But Mangrum, a twice wounded veteran from Niles, Ill., now is the choice to go on to victory.

Middlecoff, who resigned from Memphis dentistry for golf, was far from his game in the third round which required 76 strokes. That lofty score put him in a tie for 29th place.

Just behind Mangrum was Toledo's spark plug fortune heir, Frank Stranahan, with 35-35—70.

One of the old names of American golf was bracketed with three others in a tie for third place. Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., a star of the early '30s, spotted par a stroke with a 71.

Big Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., Dick Metz of Virginia Beach, and Kansas City's Leland Gibson, also had 71's.

WIND BOTHERS LITTLE

Lawson Little of Monterey, Calif., one of the best of windy weather golfers, had a 72 going into the second round.

Little's par equaller was shot into winds prevailing at 22 miles an hour and blowing 35 in gusts.

Defending Champion Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., had disappointing 73's.

Bobby Locke, the South African, and veteran professional Henry Picard of Cleveland had 75's. Byron Nelson of Roanoke, Tex., Gene Sarazen of Germantown, N. Y., and Horton Smith of Detroit had 75's. Nelson, Smith and Sarazen are former Masters winners.

Secret Session

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Baseball commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler arranged a meeting in secret session here today with club owners of the national league, presumably to discuss problems arising out of the game's reserve clause.

Indian War Clubs Stop Loss Streak, 11 to 8

Rosen and Boudreau Kayo Giant Pitchers

SHREVEPORT, La. — (INS) — The Cleveland Indians unpacked their newly-potent war clubs at Shreveport today for another slugging exhibition with the New York Giants.

Bob Lemon was to start for the Redskins and Clint Hartung for the Polo Grounders today.

The Indians finally snapped the Giants' six-game victory string yesterday with a 16-hit assault on four New York hurlers for an 11-8 victory.

Al Rosen, third-baseman candidate for Ken Keltner's job, slammed four singles in four trips to the plate and Manager Lou Boudreau knocked a round-tripper, a double and a single to bring the Indians' three-game losing streak to a halt.

Bob Feller left the mound after five innings and Cleveland was trailing, 6-3. But they came back with two runs in the sixth, two in the seventh, and four in the eighth for the win.

Sheldon Jones, ace of the Giant pitching staff, was the hardest hit of the Giant hurlers. He gave up 12 hits in the first seven innings he twirled.

Rookie hurler Mike Garcia got credit for the victory but the brightest spot of the day's pitching came from Sam Zoldak, who showed his best performance of the year by holding the Giants' sluggers to one hit in two frames.

FOUR IN FOURTH

Feller faced only nine Giant batters in the first three rounds but the New Yorkers took advantage of enough breaks in their half of the fourth inning to tally four runs, taking a 4-2 lead.

Lou Boudreau's fifth-inning homer cut the Giants' lead to one run, but the Giants added two more at the expense of Feller in the latter half of that inning.

Two more Cleveland runs in the sixth left the Indians trailing by a 6-5 count. With one man out, Rosen, Bob Kennedy and Jim Hegan each singled driving two markers across the plate.

Walker Cooper, New York catcher, greeted Mike Garcia with a home run over the left field fence in the sixth.

Cleveland tied the score in its top of the seventh, but the Giants went ahead again.

Fnially, in the eighth, Ray Murray, leading off for the Indians, walked. Thurman Tucker also walked and Herman Reich was safe on an error, filling the bases. Ray Boone walked, forcing in the tying run.

Johnny Berardino singled to left and Rosen singled also to left to bring in three more runs and end the game's scoring.

Hits Very Good . . .

DALLAS, Tex. — (AP) — Roy Smalley, the big Chicago Cub shortstop continues to delight Manager Charlie Grimm with his hitting in exhibition games.

Smalley was held to a single in the Cubs' 7 to 1 decision over the St. Louis Browns yesterday, but he still brings solace for Andy Pafko's pale hitting.

In exhibition games Smalley has belted out 30 hits, including 10 homers, two triples and seven doubles.

Battles For Berth . . .

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — (AP) — Vic Wertz, battling to keep his right field starting berth with the Detroit Tigers, should have it pretty well clinched now.

He slugged two home runs and a single yesterday as the Tigers took a 10 to 1 win over Memphis of the southern association. They play the Chicks again tonight.

★

Reds Win Again . . .

MOBILE, Ala. — (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds' hopes of fashioning a winning streak were given a boost today. They open against Mobile of the southern association, play two more games here and then go to Montgomery, Ala., for one encounter.

Manager Bucky Walters said he would start Eddie Erautt, Bud Lively and Ken Burkhart in the Mobile games.

The Reds fell by the wayside yesterday against the St. Louis Cardinals, the club which will provide opening day opposition at Cincinnati April 19.

For seven innings the Rhinelanders kept pace with the Cards in a free-hitting game, but a six-run surge in the final two rounds gave the Red Birds a 13-8 victory.

★

Who's On First . . .

BEAUMONT, Tex. — (AP) — The New York Yankees have a new candidate for their muddled first base situation. He's Bill Johnson, their veteran third baseman.

Manager Casey Stengel played Johnson at first for one inning in an intra-squad game yesterday before the Yanks broke camp at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Johnson is due to be on first tomorrow against Beaumont and presumably will remain there, at least until Stengel is forced to recall Tommy Henrich from the outfield.

★

Bucs Win, 3 to 0 . . .

BEAUMONT, Tex. — (UP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates, who shut out the Houston Buffs 3 to 0 last night, moved here today for a game against Beaumont.

Veteran righthanders Bob Muncrief and Kirby Higbe combined to hold Houston to two hits while their teammates tallied single runs in the fifth, sixth and eighth innings. Danny Murtaugh led the Pirate hitting with two singles and a double in four trips.

Pirate Manager Bill Meyer announced the optioning of Fred Strobel, 20-year-old hurler, to the Davenport, Ia., farm team.

★

Phils Slip By . . .

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — (UP) — The Philadelphia Phillies were to appear here today in an exhibition game against the Chattanooga Lookouts. Yesterday, the Phils downed the Atlanta Crackers, 7 to 6, at Atlanta with a run scored in the top half of the 11th inning.

New London 9 Slates Games

NEW LONDON — The New London Merchants are already well on the way of completion of their 1949 baseball schedule, Henry Parnell of New London announced today.

Five home and five road dates have already been booked, including all Sundays through June 12 as road games. Home games under the New London lights are scheduled for June 15, 22, 26, and July 3, 6, and 13. Parnell is attempting to line up home games for other Wednesday and Sunday nights.

Al Walters will manage the Merchants for the 11th consecutive season.

Four to Perform

ATHENS — Saturday will be spring sports day for the Ohio University Bobcats with the football, baseball, track and tennis squads performing before the home fans.

BREADON ILL—Sam Breadon, 72, former owner of the St. Louis Cardinals and a baseball figure for many years is seriously ill in a St. Louis hospital.

Two Diamond Outfits Pull Triple Plays

NEW YORK — (UP) — What is more rare than a triple play in baseball? Answer—two triple plays.

The Chicago Cubs and the Philadelphia Athletics each came up with a triple killing in exhibitions yesterday and in each case the method was the same—a line drive hit to the second basemen with runners on first and second.

At Dallas, Tex., the St. Louis Browns had two on and one out when Bob Dillinger lined to cub second-baseman Emil Verban, who flipped to shortstop Roy Smalley, who relayed to first-baseman Phil Cavaretta. The Cubs won, 7 to 1.

At Birmingham, Ala., the minor-league Barons had two on when Ralph Atkins lined to second-baseman Pete Suder of the A's. The ball went from Suder to shortstop Eddie Joost to first-baseman Ferris Fain.

Foster Sued Again By Girl

CHICAGO — (UP) — Welterweight Vince Foster of Omaha today faced a $100,000 damage suit for alleged rape.

The suit was filed in circuit court by Alice E. Smatla, 23, Kansas City. The charge grew out of an earlier rape charge against the boxer which alleged that the act occurred in a car last Feb. 7 near St. Jose, Mo. The criminal charge later was dropped at St. Joseph for lack of sufficient medical evidence.

Miss Smatla's suit yesterday again contended rape. She claimed damages on the grounds that she was pregnant.

Foster, 23-year-old rising contender for the welterweight crown, is scheduled to fight Chuck Taylor, Coalport, Pa., in the Chicago stadium tonight.

Rickey Still Seeks Pro to Play on First

FORT WORTH, TEX. — (UP) — President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers came to Fort Worth looking for a hard-hitting first baseman, and he was still a-lookin' when he left.

There was a report that the mahatma of Montague street and manager Leo Durocher of the New York Giants would talk about the possibilities of a trade.

Instead, Leo the Lip ate breakfast with Branch Rickey jr., and Rickey the elder left in his private plane for Sacramento, only talking to Durocher on the telephone briefly.

Rickey sr. had little to say before leaving Fort Worth. He conceded the Dodgers were thinking about making trade offers to the Chicago Cubs and the Giants. But no definite action had been taken, he added.

What Rickey the younger and the Lip had to say about over their ham and eggs also was a matter for speculation.

Young Rickey and the Giants have been chinning for some time in conversations that may have laid the groundwork for the trade.

As Rickey moved on to Sacramento, there was a new report that he was interested in a trade with the Philadelphia Phillies — pitcher Joe Hatten and coach Edwards in exchange for Phil First-Baseman Dick Sisler, catcher Andy Seminick and third baseman Bert Haas.

Bivins and Moore To Fight Monday

TOLEDO — (INS) — Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland heavyweight, meets Archie Moore of San Diego in a 10-round feature bout at Toledo Monday night.

The match will be the fourth meeting of the two. Each has knocked out the other, and Moore, currently on a knock-out rampage with five straight, decisioned Bivins last summer.

Scribe Reports Boston Mutiny

BOSTON — (AP) — Are the Boston Braves about to begin defense of their National league championship at swords points with their manager?

The fuss was kicked up today when Dave Egan wrote in his Boston Daily Record column the tribe is "on the verge of open revolt" against manager Billy Southworth and is "staggering under the savage impact of open dissension."

The players were described by Egan as resentful for several reasons, particularly because Southworth "has boasted in their presence that he, and he alone; masterminded them to a pennant."

Writing from Columbia, S. C., Hy Hurwoitz reported in the Boston Globe some of the players resented Southworth being feted as the man who drove an inferior team to a pennant.

Southworth sharply denied any dissension. So did those players who were questioned at Columbia where the tribe plays an exhibition today.

"There is no word of truth in the report," Southworth retorted in the South Carolina city.

"The club has been methodically getting in shape and usually when a club isn't winning there are all sorts of rumors.

"I have 10 newspapermen with the club who'll back me up."

"I had a 45 minute meeting today and it was harmonious."

Reports to Boston dailies said the "dandy little" manager called the meeting to speak about the tribe's "listless play."

Southworth seemed to take in stride the fact the Braves have a losing record (8-13) in their spring exhibition games.

"Nobody's been bearing down too hard except in games against the (Boston) Red Sox and we've beaten them two out of three," he said.

The veteran field pilot of the Braves quickly rejected reports he was "on the outs" with pitchers Warren Spahn and Johnny Sain with the flat statement "we couldn't be on better terms."

Egan wrote in his column that southpaw Spahn desired to be traded and that Sain, the league's top righthander, spoke to Southworth only on the field.

Spahn, who was an early holdout, was pictured by Egan as resentful because the manager had "intervened" and told him he was "not deserving" of a raise.

Spahn told baseball writers traveling with the club the report was "ridiculous."

Sain told the same group "I'm a quiet fellow, you know that, I usually talk only business."

Both Southworth and outfielder Jim Russell were quoted in Columbia as denying Russell had been fined $200 for returning a half hour late to the club's hotel in Bradenton, Fla., as written by Egan.

Egan also wrote that Southworth had ordered the discharge of George (Shorty) Young, veteran equipment manager and clubhouse custodian, after the club arrives home.

The columnist pictured Young as "preferring to dig ditches rather than work any longer for Southworth.

In Columbia Young snapped "no comment."

Some of the players laughed at the report they were irked at Southworth for reportedly "taking credit all winter for winning the pennant."

Time may tell but right now you're entitled to your own opinion whether the players are mutinous.

Iberia Edges Edison, 8 to 7

IBERIA—Edison scored four runs in the first inning here yesterday but the host Iberia high school team came from behind to win the opening game of the season 8-7.

Iberia tied the score in the fifth when a double by Dick Ernst and single by Al Riddle sparked a three run rally. It picked up two more in the sixth when Ernst singled with the bases loaded. Maynard Goare had a double and triple for Edison.

Golf Pro Annexes Plenty Sore Mitt

COLUMBUS — (INS) — One of the best pro golfers in Ohio may not even try to qualify for the PGA and national open this year.

He's Bob Kepler, coach of the Ohio State team and manager of the University course.

Kepler accidentally shoved the shaft of a club he was repairing through the fleshy part of his right and between the thumb and forefinger Wednesday. No bones were broken or ligaments torn, but Kepler has one heck of a sore mitt.

Named Manager

ZANESVILLE — (UP) — Pat McLaughlin, former pitcher with the Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Athletics, today was named player-manager of the Zanesville Indians of the Ohio-Indiana league.

Mickey Owen Suit Winner Over Pasquel

SPRINGFIELD, MO. — (AP) — Mickey Owen, who jumped from the major leagues to the Mexican baseball circuit three years ago, won a $51,428.56 judgement yesterday against his former boss, millionaire Jorge Pasquel.

But the biggest hope of the former catcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers still is to get back into the majors.

"Naturally I'm happy about the verdict," Owen said after a federal jury had awarded him a sum representing the unpaid portion of his salary in the Mexican league for 1946 and his full salary for 1947, 1948 and 1949.

The jury also turned down Pasquel's damage claims against Owen.

"What I really want now is to get back into organized baseball," Owen declared. He said he expected to play semi-pro baseball this summer.

Owen was one of more than half a dozen major leaguers who were lured south of the border by the Mexican league in 1946.
